Harry Hopkins Dixon, Davis Makes Second New Victims London Trip Of State Purge

Lend-Lease Co-ordinator on Survey of British Critical Needs.

By THE UNITED PRESS.
WASHINGTON, July 15.—Harry L. Hopkins has left Washington en route to London on a mission connected with his duties as co-ordinator of the lend-lease program of British aid, it was learned tonight.

Hopkins, who is making his second trip to the British Isles within a year, again will be the personal emissary of President Roosevelt. It was understood he will survey the actual critical needs of the British in order to co-ordinate them more closely with the lend-lease program.

Details Secret.

His departure came as the chief executive was drafting a new request to congress for a lend-lease appropriation expected to equal, if not surpass, the $7,000,000,000 outlay voted earlier this year.

The details of Hopkins' trip are being kept secret, it was understood, to guard his safety in travel over the Atlantic. The White House would not even confirm that he had left.

When asked, Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early said: "Ship movements are confidential."

While Early referred to "ship movements," it was considered likely Hopkins went by air, possibly using the new transatlantic ferry service inaugurated by the Army to carry official passengers and dispatches direct from Bolling Field, near Washington, to London.

Previous Survey.

Ambassador to Great Britain John G. Winant returned to his post a few weeks ago by that service.

Since Hopkins left late last week, it is conceivable he is already in London or will arrive shortly.

Hopkins made an extensive survey of British war needs winter during a lengthy visit which brought him in close association with Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Cloudy With Showers

Atlanta is in for more cloudy weather today with occasional showers this afternoon, the United States Weather Bureau announced.

Temperature extremes of 70 and 80 degrees may be expected today as compared with extremes of 72 and 84 yesterday.

Forecast for the state is also cloudy with scattered afternoon showers.

Bush Dropped; Talmadge Moves To 'Quiet Down' Controversy.

Governor Talmadge yesterday launched a movement to "quiet down" the unsettled state of affairs at the University of Georgia and the Georgia State Teachers' College at Statesboro following the action of the State Board of Regents in ousting five officials of the University System, including Dr. Walter D. Cocking, Dr. Marvin Pittman and Vice Chancellor Curtis Dixon.

During the day the Governor held lengthy conferences with Chancellor S. V. Sanford and Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia. During these conferences he emphasized the need for immediately naming successors to Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman.

Post Abolished.

Vice Chancellor Dixon was dropped from the university system in an executive session of the regents, and Chairman Sandy Beaver and Chancellor Sanford yesterday announced that the post had been abolished. At the same meeting the board dropped Professor P. D. Bush, of North Georgia College at Dahlonega, and R. E. Davis, of the animal husbandry department, of the State College of Agriculture.

Governor Talmadge said Dixon "was allowed to go" because of his previous connection with the Rosenwald Fund. He received a salary of $6,000 a year.

Chancellor Sanford was said to have told the Governor it was not necessary to name a successor to Dixon since, in the interest of economy, the regents would be able to get along without a vice chancellor.

Resignation Denied.

Dr. Sanford said he, Chairman Sandy Beaver and Governor Talmadge had been appointed as a committee to recommend the successors to Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman.

Reports were circulating that Dr. Caldwell planned to resign as president of the University of Georgia, but he denied yesterday that he had any such plans.

In his conferences with Chancellor Sanford, Governor Talmadge pointed out that he was informed from Athens and Statesboro that the feeling created by the trials of Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman would disappear quickly if their successors were named immediately.

Chancellor Sanford indicated the appointees to these posts

Line of Battle Erupting With Great Violence

Berlin Says Drives in North and South Near Objectives.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
The Russians asserted today Red forces had virtually annihilated advanced German motorized forces striking at Leningrad from the Pskov-Porkhov sector some 175 miles to the south, and that the Soviet line held fast at the center about Vitebsk in violent fighting that cost many dead on both sides.

Along the Ukrainian front, Moscow's early morning communique pictured the Nazi drive on Kiev as halted and asserted, moreover, that German mechanized troops had got so far ahead of the main forces as to be left "in a difficult situation."

In an undisclosed sector the communique said Red troops surprised and destroyed two German infantry battalions of perhaps 2,000 men each who were moving along a narrow road where Russian artillery troops were lying in ambush.

This estimate of the situation was almost diametrically opposite to that of the Germans, who said unofficially that their northern forces had reached nearly to Novgorod, which is only 100 miles southeast of Leningrad, and that the last, easternmost bunkers of the Stalin line in the Vitebsk area before Moscow had been occupied by Nazi troops.

Destroyed by Sections.

From Berlin word had come earlier that Nazi motorized units were standing "at" Kiev and that the city's fall was imminent, but an authoritative government spokesman said last night that "any assertion that German troops are at present in Kiev is premature."

Although the high command had asserted that German forces were closing in on the Ukraine capital, the spokesman said there was "no information, either official or semi-official, bearing out any belief that German troops already are there."

About Pskov-Porkhov, the Soviet communique said, German tank units were surrounded and destroyed "section by section," while the remaining Nazi troops in that area were thrown back to the west.

The Red general staff made no mention, however, of earlier reports by the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia that a Russian counter-offensive at the center had thrown the Germans back 19 miles across the Dnepr river in a 20-mile-long salient between Rogachev and Zhitobin, about 150 miles below Vitebsk.

The German command confined its review to the mere statement that progress was being made on the whole front.

The Soviet command's day communique was but little more detailed and again, as on Monday, it

President Points Way To Hold U. S. Draftees

Measure Subject To Change, He Recalls

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today threw the full force of the administration into the fight to keep draftees, National Guardsmen and reservists in service beyond their 12-month period, while the War Department officially warned congress that to let the men go would be to court disaster.

The chief executive told a press conference that in the original selective service act there was a proviso that if it were necessary draftees could be retained in service either through a declaration of a national emergency by congress or through an amendment to the law.

Men came in for a year, subject to that provision, Mr. Roosevelt said, and therefore it would not be breaking faith for congress to enact legislation requiring extended service.

The question of which method should be used, he said, is up to congress.

The President told reporters he thought it was a simple choice to make, in times like these, whether the Army should be disintegrated or not. And the decision, he said, is squarely up to congress.

The Army still is one of the smallest in the world, Mr. Roosevelt said, and there is no question that it would be disintegrated because roughly two-thirds of its

Planted Peace 500 Germans. Ideas Revealed Italians Off By Roosevelt On Transport

U. S., Europe 'Prepared' in Advance for Hitler Proposals.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Apparently preparing a cool reception for a spectacular peace offer expected at any moment from Adolf Hitler, President Roosevelt asserted today that persons in Europe or the Far East were planting peace ideas among well-meaning Americans.

The President's remarks, made at a press conference, were a follow-up to a speech in which Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, said yesterday that Hitler's peace proposals, if accepted, would "put control of the world into the hands of an irresponsible fanatic."

The President said that almost every week some well-meaning person rushes to Washington with word that persons abroad have told them that it would be a perfectly grand thing if peace could be worked out.

In some cases it appears, he said, that the peace plans have been planted with them. The planting has been done, he said, by persons who are fairly high up in foreign countries although they do not actually hold government positions.

"This has occurred, he said, at various stages of the war in western Europe and also in connection with the present eastern conflict between Germany and Russia.

Earlier in the day, Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, said he had been getting reports about unofficial Nazi "peace moves."

Welles praised LaGuardia for bringing these into the open, asserting that the mayor's speech was a timely and well-stated expression.

BRITISH HEAR NAZI PEACE OFFER IS NEAR

LONDON, July 15.—(AP)—The British Press Association reported today that Germany was preparing a new peace offensive apparently involving generous terms in the west.

Noting that German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop "is conferring with Nazi ambassadors to several western European countries who have been summoned to Berlin," the press association said that these talks arose from Adolf Hitler's failure to obtain support elsewhere for his "crusade against Communism."

Ejected Nazis Stock Up on Wine as Ship Leaves New York.

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP)—The United States government tonight herded a half a thousand German and Italian nationals into a giant Navy transport and headed them out to sea toward their warring homelands.

Among the last of the expelled Europeans to leave American soil on order of the State Department were two of Nazi Germany's most highly placed servants in this country—Dr. Hans Borchers, consul general at New York, and Captain Fritz Wiedemann, consul at San Francisco.

Arriving early tonight by plane from the west coast, these consuls and 14 others in their entourage began boarding the Coast Guard cutter Arundel at 9:52 o'clock for a quick trip down New York harbor to the anchored Navy transport West Point.

They were to be placed aboard in company of nearly 500 other ousted persons for the seven-day journey to Lisbon.

Many of the passengers, sentimentally attached to this country and its people, stood at the rail with tearful looks upon America.

The gray West Point—formerly the liner America, the largest merchant vessel ever built in this country—prepared to steam slowly into the Hudson and down past the Statue of Liberty at high tide. Because the Navy forbids the sale of liquors aboard the ship, many Italians and Germans came equipped with wines and ales.

Among those sailing were Dr. Kurt Rieth, former German ambassador to Austria, released by the State Department from Ellis Island, where he had been held on charges of violating the immigration laws, and Dr. Manfred Zapp and Guenther Tonn, German newspapermen accused of neglecting to register as foreign agents, also released from Ellis Island.

Atlanta Traffic Toll on Increase Despite Redoubled Safety Drive

(See Picture Above.)

The toll of death and injury in traffic accidents is on the increase in Atlanta. Despite the 25-mile-an-hour speed law, designed to make the streets safer, and despite the one-way streets, designed to lessen traffic congestion, accidents are mounting.

Through July 14 this year two more people had been killed, 185 more people had been injured, and 231 more accidents had occurred than in the same period last year.

The traffic "clock" at Five Points through that date showed 21 persons killed as compared with 19 killed by the same date last year; 585 persons injured as compared with 400, and 1,977 accidents reported as compared with 1,746 through July 14, 1940.

Already this month 45 persons have been injured, only seven fewer than the 52 hurt during the whole of July last year.

Police records reveal the most dangerous streets. Boulevard, Edgewood avenue, Ponce de Leon avenue, Peachtree street and North avenue lead the list. Courtland street, Central avenue, Spring street, Pryor street, Memorial drive, Forsyth street, Highland avenue, Gordon street, Lee street, and Ashby street are close behind.

Police, recognizing the increasing danger, have doubled their efforts. Three thousand, six hundred and thirty cases for violation of traffic rules were booked in June, as compared with 1,665 cases during January. In June the number of convictions—1,827—exceeded the total number of cases made during January.

President Asks Nurse Indicted Power To Set In Slaying of Time of U. S. Mrs. Campbell

Daylight Saving Proposal Designed To Conserve Electricity.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—In a surprise move that may alter the living habits of millions of Americans, President Roosevelt asked congress today for authority to order a far-flung extension of daylight saving time.

Under the plan, which is designed to conserve electricity for defense production, he could order clocks throughout the country, or in any part of the country, to be turned as much as two hours forward for the whole year or any part of the year. However, because the power situation varies in different localities, it was indicated that no blanket advance for the whole country was actually planned.

Chairman Lea, Democrat, California, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, promptly announced he would introduce the bill.

In his letter to congress the President included a table which estimated that 736,282,000 kilowatt hours of energy could be saved throughout the country in a year by daylight saving.

"I WON'T DO IT," TALMADGE SAYS TO F. D. R.'S REQUEST
"I won't do it," Governor Eugene Talmadge asserted yesterday when asked if he would proclaim daylight saving time for Georgia in accordance with a request by President Roosevelt.

"I don't think it's practical in Georgia since we have just advanced our time an hour," the Governor added, referring to recent legislation placing the entire state on eastern standard time.

Talmadge pointed out he has not yet received the President's letter and asserted he intended "no disrespect" of the President in his attitude, but said he felt the state had not had sufficient time to become adjusted to the recent time shift.

Mr. Roosevelt sent a request to 18 southern governors today

Husband Dies of Poison Dose Following Wife's Death.

A murder indictment was returned yesterday against Mrs. Bernice Rogers, a practical nurse, for the slaying of Mrs. Dena Campbell, wife of Steve Campbell, who Mrs. Rogers claimed was her former husband.

As Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy received the papers in Fulton superior court Steve Campbell died at Grady hospital—of a poison dose which he told police was self-administered.

When informed that he was dead, Mrs. Rogers was quoted as saying: "I've been expecting it. As God is my witness, that dead woman is the cause of it all. I would like to go to his funeral."

Campbell was admitted to Grady hospital Monday night, supposedly suffering from a heart attack. Before he died, he told police that he had swallowed poison.

He had been living in a downtown hotel since July 8 when Mrs. Rogers, the indictment charged, met Mrs. Campbell on Forsyth street, and began a discussion of Campbell with her which ended in the slaying.

Campbell is survived by a sister, Mrs. Charles Alexander, of Detroit, Mich.; an aunt, Mrs. George Algers, of New York city, and a cousin, A. Algers, of New York city. Funeral arrangements will be announced later by Harry G. Poole.

The accused woman, who gave herself up to police, claimed the shooting occurred when Mrs. Campbell attempted to take the gun from her.

When arrested the 40-year-old practical nurse told police that the dead woman was not taking good care of Campbell, who she said was ill.

WEYGAND TO ALGIERS.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, July 15.—(AP)—General Maxime Weygand, France's commander in chief in North Africa, flew back to Algiers today after five days of consultations here coinciding with the conclusion of the Syrian armistice.

Paul Sprayberry Loses Right Hand

Paul Sprayberry, for the past three seasons a star end on Georgia Tech's football team, yesterday had his right hand amputated after having it crushed in an accident while working on his job with the telephone company.

The six-foot, three-inch boy, who alternated with George Webb at right end for the Jackets, is in St. Joseph's Infirmary. He was reported resting well last night.

He was one of the big stars in Tech's Orange Bowl victory on January 1, 1940. He also played on the basketball team for two years.

The accident occurred yesterday morning. It was necessary to amputate the hand at the wrist. Before entering Tech, Sprayberry's home was in Alexandria, Ala. He has finished his athletic career at Tech.

Kiwanis Club Luncheon Host To Registrants

Doors to Advancement in Services Open, Mundorff Says.

The doors to advancement are wide open in both the Army and Navy to men registered under the selective service act, Lieutenant Roy Mundorff, U. S. N., yesterday told about 100 new registrants at a luncheon tendered them by the Atlanta Kiwanis Club.

Explaining that young men of intelligence and capability may enlist in many branches of the service and by advancing themselves through preparation can perform an even greater service to their country, Lieutenant Mundorff emphasized the need for special training.

Lieutenant Commander Jesse Draper, Navy liaison officer at the state selective service headquarters, presided. The program was under the sponsorship of the citizenship committee of the club.

Guests of honor, in addition to the selectees, included: Brigadier General Sion B. Hawkins, Lieutenant Colonel A. T. Colley, Lieutenant Colonel H. Cliff Hatcher, Major Charles J. Brockman, Colonel Edgar Crane, Major Charles F. Heard, Major Wesley U. Moran, Lieutenant Colonel James H. Skelton Jr., Lieutenant Commander D. Ward Harrington, Lieutenant J. L. ## Award of Travel Fellowships Is Occasion for New Criticism.

Governor Talmadge yesterday issued a statement in which he linked the president of the University of Georgia and two newspaper editors with the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

In a statement prepared for publication in his personal newspaper, The Statesman, the Governor called attention to a 1937 newspaper article in which it was announced that five Georgians had been awarded traveling fellowships by the fund.

Among them were Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University; Ralph McGill, then sports editor and now executive editor of The Atlanta Constitution, and James S. Pope, then assistant managing editor of the Atlanta Journal and now managing editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal. All three awards were for study in Europe.

Talmadge charged that the fund paid McGill "to make a trip abroad and to come back and write false and prejudicial articles in The Atlanta Constitution, and to color and direct the whole policies of that paper."

McGill, he also charged, traveled over Europe while on the pay roll of the Rosenwald Fund and at the same time drew $100 a month from the state as head of the state athletic commission.

Of Pope he said only "I wish to call your attention to the activities of James S. Pope, of the Atlanta Journal, in connection with the Rosenwald Fund." Then he pointed out Pope had received a scholarship for travel in England and Europe. Pope went to the Louisville paper several months ago.

The Governor made no comment on Caldwell's fellowship, but Chancellor Sanford said Caldwell did not accept the grant.

Fate of Army Up to Congress, Roosevelt Says

manpower would have to be replaced by new selectees upon completion of the present year's training by men originally chosen for service.

In a letter to Speaker Rayburn, Acting Secretary of War Robert Patterson asserted that the President not only approved legislation empowering him to extend the period of service indefinitely, but desired that congress remove the existing 900,000 limit on the number of draftees who can be in service at any one time. Mr. Roosevelt also approved legislation authorizing him to keep all Army regulars in service until six months after the end of the emergency.

Patterson's letter said: "The sequence of German conquests which has continued uninterruptedly from Austria to Russia has been based on the anticipated failure of the countries concerned properly to prepare against invasion."

"No Gamble With Security. They have in each case launched an overwhelming force against an unprepared army. We cannot speculate with the security of this nation."

After asserting that failure to pass the suggested legislation "would be to court disaster," he continued:

"If the selective training and service act remains unchanged in regard to the length of such training and service, we will be compelled during the coming months to relieve from active service approximately two-thirds of the enlisted men of the Army of the United States now in training and to replace them with raw recruits. "Such a situation is unthinkable. The Army must be in a state of immediate readiness for service while it is training men for the protection of the country."

Situation Changed.

Patterson said that at the time the original legislation was enacted providing for a 12-month tour of duty, "the international situation had not assumed the very grave aspect of today."

The National Guard, he said, has now been "seasoned" and its technical training and general efficiency greatly improved, "while the regular Army is officered with reserve officers to approximately three-fourths of the officer strength of the tactical divisions. Patterson offered legislation which would authorize the President, during the period of the emergency he proclaimed last May 27, to induct into the armed forces "such number of men, without limitation, to serve for such period beyond 12 months as the President may deem necessary in the interests of national defense."

Extensions Allowed.

It also would allow the President to extend indefinitely the period of active military service of persons now on duty under the selective service and training act, which the legislation would continue in effect until six months after the emergency is declared ended, or until May 15, 1945.

The President also would be empowered to extend until six months after the emergency the period of enlistment, appointment or commission of Army personnel. The Senate Military Committee revealed today that General George C. Marshall, the Army chief of staff, had testified that unless the service period of selectees and reserves is prolonged a "national tragedy" may result. "Our trained forces will largely melt away," the general said.

His testimony, presented on June 9, showed that he also urged congress to declare the existence of a national emergency, so that the men now in training might be retained in the Army beyond the period of one year originally contemplated.

Meanwhile, Patterson appeared before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee to report "great progress" in defense production. But he added that "for the total warfare of the kind now raging in Europe we can never have enough munitions."

The day produced numerous other developments related to the defense and international situations.

Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, advocated the immediate repeal of the neutrality act. He said the law was enacted "because a lot of people were afraid of Hitler" and that "we should tell him now that we are not afraid."

Eire Seeks Ships.

The government of Eire asked for permission to buy American ships to move thousands of tons of goods piled on the docks of New York. Two cargo ships recently were sold to Eire but have not yet been put in service. The Eire government asked for about a dozen more.

Marshall's proposal that the training of selectees, National Guardsmen and reserves be extended was the most controversial question in congress today. Administration leaders in congress reached a decision yesterday to press ahead for such legislation, but simultaneously sidetracked proposals for the elimination of legal restrictions which prevent the sending of such forces outside the Western Hemisphere or American possessions.

Army Units Preferable.

In his testimony before the Senate Committee, the day after the occupation of Iceland was announced, Marshall said that the action should have been carried out by special Army units, instead of Marines. This was impossible, however, he said, because of the one-year draft service rule.

In order to send reservists or draftees on such a mission, he explained, the Army would have had to call for volunteers to serve beyond their one-year term.

"Such a situation would have advertised the convoy before it sailed and we would have been risking the lives of everyone in it. "If you serve notice you are going to send an expedition of that nature, you are also offering an opportunity to any hostile people to take such action as they see fit."

avoided mention of place names, speaking only in such generalities as the "northwest and west directions."

In these "directions"—in the Leningrad area and at the center protecting Moscow—the Red general staff merely reported heavy fighting, stating that elsewhere there had been "no particular changes in the positions of troops" as of yesterday.

That phraseology was broad enough to include the Ukrainian front where the Germans themselves acknowledged difficulty in their drive upon the provincial capital of Kiev, although asserting that Soviet resistance had ultimately been crushed.

Bloody Fighting Near Kiev.

From all the available information it appeared that the Russians were making an especially bloody and determined fight to hold the Kiev approaches. The Germans themselves reported that hundreds of giant Red tanks were in action.

The Russians reported almost continuous bombing attacks on German military troops, and heavy raids on oil fields in German-occupied Rumania.

The violent action along the Dnepr, involving large forces, was reported by the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia.

The Red counterattacks were sprung upon a line running from Rogachev, on the west bank of the Dnepr, southward some 20 miles to Zlobin, the report said. The recapture of both towns from the invaders had been announced on Sunday.

Later dispatches from the front stated that the Russian advance was continuing.

Regiments Said Smashed.

Russian troops which crossed the Dnepr above Rogachev in concert with another column moving roughly parallel from Zlobin claimed the destruction of a number of German artillery batteries and concentrations of tanks, and reported that German infantry had been put to flight.

The Red army communique said that one German infantry regiment, one artillery regiment and a battalion had been utterly smashed in a Soviet counterattack of infantrymen operating behind Red tanks.

"The enemy was routed and completely demoralized," it was added. "They fled in disorder." Captured, it was said, were 56 guns, 80 seven-ton trucks with ammunition and equipment, 600 carts, 1,000 horses, a number of small tanks and a supply of machine guns, rifles, shells and other ammunition.

"For miles, said the official account, the battle line was strewn with German bodies.

In the air, Soviet bombers were declared to have delivered strong running attacks against mechanized Nazi forces.

Lufwaffe Said Effective.

The German Luftwaffe was reported by Berlin to have blasted a path of blazing destruction ahead of advancing Germans close to Novgorod, just 100 miles southeast of Leningrad and in the area of Smolensk, on the road to Moscow.

DNB, German official news agency, said strong Nazi air units effectively bombed the highway from Smolensk to Moscow and the railway network in that area, while Adolf Hitler's land forces were reported to have captured vital Red army defense positions. In the Vitebsk area, some 300 miles from the Russian capital, a number of railway stations and spur lines and pontoon bridges were smashed in this sector, the news agency asserted, adding that in other sections of the vast battle line Soviet rear communications and supply bases were heavily assaulted in support of attacking Nazi infantrymen.

In the Smolensk area alone DNB said the Luftwaffe destroyed 33 tanks, 500 trucks and a great number of guns.

Within 24 hours, it went on, German chasers shot down 72 Russian planes and destroyed an additional 150 on the ground, bringing Soviet plane losses to date to 7,182.

Regent Hunter To 'Cool Off' Before Talking

Savannah Member of Board 'Incensed' Over Atlanta Decision.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 15.—(AP) E. Ormonde Hunter, member of the Board of Regents of the university system, said here today he was so incensed at what took place in Atlanta Monday he wanted several days "cooling off" time before issuing a statement.

Hunter, who is under fire of Governor Talmadge for opposing the dismissal of Dr. Walter Cocking, dean of the college of education at the University of Georgia, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, made this brief statement:

"I am too incensed at what took place in Atlanta to make a statement at this time. I shall give myself three or four days' cooling off time. By then I shall have determined what I shall do and will then be glad to give a statement of the entire affair."

Patriotic Letter Writer Gets Reply

ST. LOUIS, July 15.—(AP)—Harry R. Pelikan, 28-year-old author of an inspiring letter on the privilege of being an American, received a reply from President Roosevelt today and interpreted it as a commission to "write, talk and sell America."

The President wrote to Pelikan, in explanation of having made the letter public at a press conference last week.

"That splendid letter of yours gave such fine exemplification of true Americanism that I felt warranted in sharing it with our fellow countrymen. It states some profound truths vividly and with a discerning sense of values and should inspire all who read it with a deeper appreciation of their heritage of freedom."

Georgia Teachers' College $72,000.

This sum, he said, "doesn't include the hundreds of thousands of dollars that the fund provided for building Negro schools and libraries before it began a development of its program of rural education."

Cocking To Speak.

Dixon said he understood his contract, like those of Cocking and Pittman, ran until August 31. Governor Talmadge said the present contracts of Cocking and Pittman "won't be changed, but if they want to take a vacation I'd be in favor of giving them one, provided they were subject to call."

In the meantime, it appeared that some folks in Georgia want to hear more about Dean Cocking's side of the story.

Cocking yesterday accepted an invitation to "tell all" at a meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Griffin Wednesday, July 23. His Weaver, program chairman, extended the invitation.

Miller R. Bell's comment yesterday on Monday's Board of Regents meeting at which he was "bounced" was terse: "There was a meeting Sunday at Brenner Pass. Monday everybody was there but Hess, who is being held by the British."

would be known within the next three or four days.

Lunch With Barron.

Governor Talmadge yesterday had lunch with Dr. Sanford and David L. (Red) Barron, president of the Georgia Vocational and Trades School.

When asked if he planned to recommend Barron for one of the vacant places, the Governor said, "No comment."

At the Cocking and Pittman "trial" Monday, spokesmen for the Governor attempted to show that the Rosenwald Fund sought racial equality and, therefore, by implication, anyone having anything to do with it must advocate such equality.

Talmadge said Dixon and Davis "were connected with the Rosenwald Fund as much as the others" and added the board voted unanimously not to renew their contracts.

Dixon, Davis and Bush were listed in university system records as natives of Georgia. The Governor previously had hinted he might "purge" non-native Georgians in the university system.

Budget Is 'Headache.'

When State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. today presented the university system's quarterly budget, containing the birthplaces of all employees, to the Governor, Talmadge pushed it over to one side, clapped his hat over it and said:

"That's a pain and a headache. I've got to take a day or two off on that."

Dixon said he had not been notified of his ouster prior to newsman's informing him and said he had made no plans for the future. He added that Davis, listed on university system records as a beef, cattle and sheep specialist of the Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Georgia, had "absolutely no connection with the Rosenwald Fund."

Dixon said he personally had been "intimately connected" with the fund and pointed out that he was its director of rural education from 1936 until he assumed his present position last July.

Contributed $325,000.

Dixon said that since 1935 the Rosenwald Fund had contributed $325,000 to Georgia.

Of this amount, he added, $139,000 was given to the Fort Valley State College for Negroes and $187,000 was distributed among three white colleges. The University of Georgia, he said, received $28,000, the West Georgia College at Carrollton $87,000, and

TALMADGE CHARGED WITH 'HITLER METHODS'

NEW YORK, July 15.—(P)—The Keep America Out of War Congress today asserted that Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, used "Hitler methods" and "undemocratic procedure" in obtaining dismissal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking as dean of the University of Georgia School of Education and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman as president of Georgia Teachers' College.

In a telegram sent by Mary W. Hillyer, executive director, the congress said: "One reason why we all hate Hitler is because of his racial intolerance. You are using Hitler methods in Georgia."

Lower Telephone Rates Are Urged for Soldiers

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 15.—(P)—Lower telephone rates throughout the nation for soldiers calling their homes from military camps was urged by a Pennsylvania public utility commissioner today as a "morale builder" for the growing Army.

Deer Slaughter Bill Approved

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(P)—The Senate Indian Affairs Committee approved legislation today which would compel Secretary Ickes to permit the slaughter of deer on Seminole Indian lands in Florida.

Introduced by Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, the bill would prohibit any further interference on Ickes' part with the eradication campaign of state and federal agricultural departments.

At an all-day hearing, Indian Commissioner John Collier declared that in Louisiana, where there were as many deer as in Florida, the agriculture department controlled the tick without a slaughter campaign, and Ickes wanted to know why it could not be done in Florida.

"Hasn't the Secretary of the Interior any confidence in the Agriculture Department?" asked Senator Langer, Republican, North Dakota.

"He has no lack of confidence in them," Collier replied, "but he also has confidence in men who have no long record in this matter and who have no face-saving to do."

Georgia Treatment Of Labor Denounced

Treatment of labor in Georgia was vigorously denounced yesterday by Holt Ross, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, in an address at the Mississippi state federation meeting in Meridian.

A former president of the state group, Ross said: "It is a disgrace to Georgia, to the south and to civilization. Personally, I have been bruised, knocked in the head, kicked and left dying in the roadway, but I never have and never will stop preaching the gospel of labor's rights."

Senate Passes Bill for Federal Pipe Line Aid

Texas to New Jersey Oil System To Cost $70,000,000.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(P)—The senate passed legislation today designated to facilitate early construction of a pipe line from the east Texas oil fields to the east coast to relieve a threatened oil shortage in the latter area. The measure, which had previously been passed by the house in slightly different form, would permit the President, when necessary for national-defense purposes, to let private companies use the government's right of eminent domain in obtaining necessary land for pipe line construction. Government loans to private companies would be authorized.

The legislation also would empower the government to engage directly in construction and operation of a pipe line when it was found to be "impracticable" for private interests to do so.

Senator Stewart, Democrat, Tennessee, told the senate that the purpose of the legislation was to permit private construction and operation and that it was not intended that the government should engage in the work.

He said that the projected line to New Jersey refineries was expected to cost $70,000,000 and was designed to meet a shortage threatened by the transfer of American tankers to Britain.

Mindling Says Swithin Belief Is Impossible

In Entire Atlanta History Records Show Only 20-Day Streak.

By FRANK DRAKE.
Saint Swithin's Day has come and went, and from the heavens rain was sent. But showers will not fall much more.

'Cause Prophet Mindling done said "No!"
Yep, it rained yesterday on the day that popular belief says indicates the weather for 40 consecutive days and if it's so Atlanta is in for a long wet spell, but George W. Mindling, the weatherman here, pooh-pooh's the whole idea.

Rain 40 days?
"Why, in all its history Atlanta has never had more than 20 days of consecutive rain and that was way back in 1905," Mindling blared forth as he grabbed up his book of statistics and proved further that on Saint Swithin's Day in 1905 it didn't rain a drop and that it was one of only seven days during that entire month of July it didn't rain. So there!

Writes Poem.
But if cold, hard statistics aren't enough Mr. Mindling has written a poetic version that will end all doubt.

Here 'tis:
"They have told us a terrible wet spell is due,
If it rains the 15th of July,
Forty days will be rainy before it gets through.
With a deluge each day from the sky,
Though it never did happen, they still
And they stick to their claim till they die.
Every year in July this old claim they renew,
But they can't show the first reason why."
"In Atlanta we never had 40 days straight giving more or less rain every day. So we need not expect such an outlandish fate.
When it rains on the Saint Swithin Day."

Yesterday began "dog days," too, the period relating to the position of the dog star Sirius and the superstition that dogs are more inclined to have hydrophobia in hot July and August. This belief is exploded, too, by statistics which show dogs go mad in any month.

But as to the rains coming for 40 days just because it rained on St. Swithin's day, Mindling is certain the wet spell will be broken within a few days.

However, he predicts showers today and tomorrow and thinks it probably will wet a little for the rest of the week. It will be mostly cloudy today, he says, with temperature extremes of 70 and 88.

Just in case someone has forgotten or never knew about Saint Swithin, our good friend and constant companion, Webster, disposes of him by saying he was a bishop in Winchester, England, and adds that his day is supposed to indicate whether it will rain or be dry for 40 consecutive days thereafter. Webster also adds that the good bishop expired in the year 862—a little matter of more than 1,000 years ago.

So that no one will become confused, Webster says too that the bishop is known both as Saint Swithin and Saint Swithun. You can take your pick—Swithin your power.

There's an interesting little legend in connection with the bishop's bones. It seems when Swithin died they buried him in the churchyard, where he wanted to be, but later a committee came along with the idea of digging him up and putting him in the church. And 'tis said that they started the digging on July 15 and it rained. So did it on the sixteenth—and the seventeenth—and for a total of 40 days, thereby keeping the committee from meddling with the bishop's bones.

Exhibitors See Screenings Here

Georgia movie exhibitors this week for the first time were seeing what they were buying, as producers, obeying a federal ban on block-booking of 52 pictures in a batch—sight unseen, screened their products in groups of five on Film Row.

One of the outstanding new films to be seen is R-K-O's "Citizen Kane," brain-child and handiwork of Orson Welles, the boy wonder. It is a story of a power-thirsty newspaper publisher and will be screened by R-K-O at 11 o'clock tomorrow at 191 Walton street.

Other producers who are showing the exhibitors their celluloid wares are Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Compensation Act Attacked In Georgia Suit

Constitutionality of Law Under Fire in Court for First Time.

Georgia's unemployment compensation act was attacked in the state supreme court yesterday as "socialistic" legislation that "promotes slothfulness and indolence and discourages employment."

The constitutionality of the act, passed in 1937, was questioned by Gernatt's Creamery, of Savannah, in a suit brought against Ben T. Huie as commissioner of labor. George G. McCoy, attorney for the creamery, said the legislation was "contrary in word and spirit to our democratic and constitutional form of government." He added that it abridged the inherent rights of citizens and was partial in that it did not include all employees.

McCoy further contended the act was a "product of coercion by the federal government." The creamery, he said, was resisting payments called for in the act on the grounds that the measure violated the constitution.

Clifford Walker, general counsel for the Labor Department, pointed out that the present suit was the first attack on the constitutionality of the Georgia act and said the legislation was similar to that which other states have enacted "in aid of and in co-operation with" federal security laws.

The supreme courts of approximately one-half of the states, Walker said, "have without exception upheld the constitutionality of these state acts." He added that several of these state court decisions have been affirmed by the United States supreme court.

The act provides for employers to contribute to a fund out of which employees are paid compensation when they lose jobs without fault of their own.

Tombstone, Not Liquor.

Causes Auto To Sag
Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
CHATSORTH, Ga., July 15.—Murray county lies in the path of liquor runners who transport moonshine liquor from the mountains of northeast Georgia to the customers and Sheriff John W. Morrison keeps a sharp lookout for cars that appear to be heavily loaded.

A few days ago a car passed along the highway near the jail with only one occupant and it appeared to be so heavily loaded that the rear springs were sagging almost to the axle. This aroused the sheriff's suspicion and he decided to investigate.

The sheriff had little trouble in overtaking the auto, and the driver offered no objections to the car being searched. In the back seat the sheriff found a tombstone, instead of the liquor he was expecting to uncover.

Tobacco Group To Attend Date Hearing Today

Valdosta Man Sees Danger to Growers If Date Is Changed.

By The Associated Press.
Tobacco growers seeking to postpone the opening of Georgia markets from August 5 to August 15 yesterday marshaled facts and figures for presentation at a Durham, N. C., meeting today.

Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder said he understood that delegations from Pelham, Macon and Statesboro would appear at the Durham conference and ask for the August 15 date instead.

The commissioner, pointing out that this year's crop is exceptionally late because of spring drouth, said he would ask the committee fixing sales dates to extend the Georgia period each season in the future.

Carolina warehousemen probably will oppose his request for delay in opening, Linder said, but added:

"Insofar as I can see it would work no hardship or loss on the Carolina tobacco growers or the Carolina market if Georgia was to open 10 or 15 days later."

He urged Georgia growers to attend the Durham meeting if they could not attend to telegraph him if they favored postponement of the opening date.

VALDOSTA SAYS
BUYERS WOULD LEAVE

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
VALDOSTA, Ga., July 15.—If the date of the opening of the tobacco market in Georgia is changed from August 5 to 15, it will be necessary to set back the opening dates of the South Carolina, the eastern Carolina and the old Carolina and Kentucky market opening dates, it is pointed out by representatives of the tobacco industry in Valdosta.

The Georgia crop ripens earlier than the South Carolina weed, and the crops in the other belts ripen still later, making it necessary to set the first opening date so that the buyers can move upward gradually as the tobacco ripens.

The opening date in South Carolina is August 12, one week later than the Georgia opening, and the eastern North Carolina markets open August 26.

A veteran Valdosta tobacco man makes this observation about the proposed change:

"If the date is set forward from August 5 to 15 the Georgia growers will suffer from a serious handicap not heretofore mentioned. The buying companies will be compelled to send their best buyers to the older belts and this will leave the Georgia market to be handled almost entirely by substitute buyers—men not as experienced as the big buyers who come to Georgia to open the season. This will cause a far greater loss to the growers than anything else that can happen."

Defense Week Is Proclaimed By Talmadge

Aluminum Collection Drive Is Ordered for July 21-29.

Governor Talmadge yesterday issued a proclamation designating the week of July 21-29 as National Defense Aluminum Collection Week in Georgia.

He called on Georgia residents to donate all unserviceable aluminum articles to local collection committees which have been set up by the Georgia Council for National Defense.

"The national defense program," said Talmadge, "faces a serious handicap because of an alarming shortage of aluminum... the most essential product in the building of airplanes, tanks, guns, battleships, shells, bomb fuses and many other articles of military equipment now vitally necessary to the adequate defense of America."

Simultaneously, Lee Whitney, director of Aluminum for Defense Drive in Massachusetts, challenged Georgia and the other 11 original colonies to match that state in the national drive, from July 21 to 29. "Massachusetts still insists she led the original colonies in the fight for freedom. Now we challenge the other 12 original colonies to match Massachusetts in the Aluminum for Defense Drive, July 21 to 29. We insist we shall collect more aluminum per capita than any of the other former colonies," he said.

2 Die as Plane Falls Near Macon

MACON, Ga., July 15.—(AP)—Two young Army fliers were killed today when their plane dropped into a farm field at Walden, about a mile from the Army air base here.

The fliers were on a practice flight in a formation led by Lieutenant John Andrews, who reported the plane dropped out of the formation for some unexplained and shortly afterwards crashed.

Barrett, 23, was a graduate of the Maxwell Field school. He was the son of Mrs. Edna Barrett, of Warren, Me., and had been assigned to Cochran Field here last May.

During 22, was the son of Mrs. Florence Cosner, of Hollywood. He took his primary training at Albany, Ga.

An Army board to investigate the accident will be appointed shortly, officers here said.

131 Polio Cases Found in State Within 45 Days

Health Department Suggests Way to Avoid Disease.

Within the last 45 days' 131 cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in Georgia, Dr. Joe P. Bowdoin, director of the division of preventable diseases, State Department of Health, said yesterday.

Nine cases were reported prior to June 1, raising the total for the year to 140. There were 169 cases reported in 1936. Of the 131 cases discovered between June 1 and July 15, 49 were in Atlanta.

In announcing the total, Dr. Bowdoin said, "It is probable that the disease will continue during the next few weeks and that further spread will take place." Dr. Bowdoin said a majority of the cases were mild.

Dr. Bowdoin described infantile paralysis as an inflammation of the gray matter within the spinal cord which originates impulses or relays them from the brain to the nerves. This gray matter in the spinal cord produces motion in muscles and also transmits sensations which come from the skin, joints, etc., to the brain.

Cells Destroyed.
The technical designation for the disease is poliomyelitis—polio—gray; myelitis—pith, or marrow; itis—inflammation.

Inflammation of the "pith" results in the destruction of a variable number of cells and consequently muscle fibers which receive their impulses from the gray matter in the cord are no longer able to contract—in other words they become paralyzed.

Dr. Bowdoin recommended immediate isolation of all cases and discouraged "visiting about and gatherings, especially where children are concerned."

As a guide to minimize the possibility of contracting the disease, Dr. Bowdoin offered the following suggestions:

1. All children having fever or other upset of unknown cause should be put in bed, isolated from other children and the family physician called.

2. Parents should avoid unnecessary handling or fondling of small children and such handling by others should be discouraged.

3. Children should avoid unnecessary contact with people, particularly with children with whom they are not in the habit of associating.

4. Children should avoid unusual physical exertion which would produce unusual fatigue.

5. Children should not be allowed to play with or visit any sick child.

A breakdown of cases by counties follows:

Bibb, 2; Brooks, 1; Bulloch, 1; Carroll, 1; Chatham, 1; Clarke, 3; Clayton, 4; Cobb, 2; Cook, 2; Crisp, 8; DeKalb, 8; Dodge, 2; Douglas, 1; Fulton, 54; Glynn, 1; Gwinnett, 12; Hancock, 2; Haralson, 3; Jackson, 1; Jefferson, 3; Lowndes, 1; Meriwether, 2; Muscogee, 2; Polk, 1; Spalding, 1; Stewart, 1; Talbot, 1; Turner, 1; Upson, 7; Walton, 2; Whitfield, 1.

Bill Brown, 13, Derby Winner At Commerce

Victor in Field of 24 Was Driving First 'Soap Box.'

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE, Staff Writer.

COMMERCE, Ga., July 15.—Bill Brown, an American boy in every sense, built his first Soap Box Derby racer this year and drove it across the finish line the victor in a field of 24 entrants in this city's first derby. Brown, a 13-year-old youth, saw Commerce's largest crowd witness the final heats today.

Persons outnumbering the city's actual population lined a hillside on the Homer-Commerce highway. A. D. Bolton, local Chevrolet dealer, sponsored the race, together with the local newspaper and The Constitution, and gave the boys a hot dog dinner last night preparatory to their racing today.

All in all, Commerce manifested a large amount of enthusiasm for the event.

The race concludes the zone meets for the state. Brown, together with other zone winners, will race the Atlanta champion in the north Georgia finals in Atlanta Saturday afternoon.

pointing out the time change would be of assistance in power conservation in the present emergency.

Two southeastern governors stood committed to daylight time last night, the Associated Press said.

They were J. M. Broughton, of North Carolina, and Frank Dixon, of Alabama.

Governor Paul B. Johnson, of Mississippi, and Governor Spensard Holland, of Florida, declined to state their positions until they had formally received copies of the letter Mr. Roosevelt sent to the chief executives of eight states today urging the action.

Alabama Governor Dixon said he would act promptly on receipt of the President's letter to place all state agencies on daylight saving time at midnight Saturday and would call upon county and municipal governments to fall into line.

Alabama abandoned daylight time last year after a state-wide trial of several weeks.

Berlin Press Increases Attacks on Roosevelt

BERLIN, July 15.—(AP)—Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, German Foreign Office mouthpiece, tonight accused President Roosevelt of "preparing the most detestable trick—namely, pushing his own nation, arm-in-arm, with Bolshevism, into war."

Press attacks on the President increased in intensity today. Virtually the entire afternoon and evening press followed the same line as Korrespondenz.

A year has not passed since, as a presidential candidate, President Roosevelt promised the people to "do everything possible to keep the country out of war," Korrespondenz said.

Nothing has been done since then by the Axis powers, the organ asserted, which could raise or intensify suspicion among inhabitants of the western hemisphere that an attack on their continent was being planned.

Miss Daniels has issued an appeal to housewives and restaurants for all discarded pickle, jam, jelly, mayonnaise and relish jars which usually go to the trash can, which she says may be used in the food canning and preservation campaign.

Air Mail Dispute Of 1934 Resumed

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(UP) Echoes of the sensational air mail contract dispute of seven years ago were heard today when a United States court of claims commissioner held in effect that the Roosevelt administration had no justification for cancelling the pacts which the Hoover regime had signed with commercial companies.

Commissioner Richard H. Akers filed with the court a report stating that the contracts annulled in February, 1934, by then Postmaster General James A. Farley were not obtained through fraud, collusion or conspiracy.

The administration later turned the job of flying the mail back to private companies.

Meanwhile, however, companies whose contracts Farley had annulled filed suit, and the cases still are being litigated in the United States court of claims.

Old Lige Gets $100 Mule With Donated Fund

Sympathetic Readers Provide Successor to Faithful 'Doc.'

Old Lige was a happy man yesterday.

The elderly Atlanta Negro bought himself a mule—thanks to the generosity of Atlantans and Georgians who contributed to a fund to enable Old Lige to replace the faithful old horse, Doc, with which Lige had earned a livelihood for many years.

It was just about two weeks ago that tragedy entered the life of Old Lige when Doc was injured so badly the animal had to be slain.

The Constitution carried the account of this development in Old Lige's personal history, and, spontaneously, Atlantans and Georgians came to Lige's rescue. An informal fund-raising campaign was started, and contributions poured in to The Constitution.

It wasn't long before almost a hundred dollars was in the "pot" for Lige. So yesterday, with the money—$92.61—he went to the mule market and bought an animal which will help him make a living.

The man from whom Lige bought the mule did his share, too, selling a $100 mule for Lige's $92.61. So now, Old Lige is all set again.

"I sure thank everybody who helped me get the mule," he said. "And I'm mighty thankful to The Constitution for letting folks know about my trouble. I guess I'll just naturally have to read The Constitution every morning now for the rest of my life."

Which is very much OK with The Constitution, Lige.

Writ Opposed

For Head Slayer

Quincy Arnold, assistant solicitor general, will leave this morning for Savannah to oppose a habeas corpus action in federal court in behalf of Richard Smith, Negro, convicted killer of T. H. Head, night watchman at Rhodes Center.

Arnold said the action charges local authorities with abridging Smith's constitutional rights in obtaining a confession by duress, and that he did not have a fair trial when a jury found him guilty of the slaying and he was sentenced to death.

Smith has won several stays of sentence, and has been to Reidsville for execution several times. The killing took place in a liquor store robbery in December, 1938.

Rejections Salary Raise For Venereal To 'Minimum' Disease Gain Asked for 400

This and Mental Defects Bar Rising Number of Georgians.

Rejections of Georgia draft registrants at Army induction stations for venereal disease and mental defects has nearly doubled during the last three months, a report from state selective service headquarters yesterday indicated.

Rejections because of venereal disease have jumped from 10 per cent in March to 18.8 per cent in May and rejections for nervous disorders, mostly psychoneurosis, have risen from 4.5 to 10 per cent.

Most of the increase in venereal rejections was among Negroes, while white registrants led in rejections for psychoneurosis.

A selective service official said the probable reason for the increase was that Army doctors are now "clamping down" on such troubles and that local doctors are not always able to give adequate psychiatric tests.

Heart and blood defects caused rejection of 11.5 per cent of the men sent to Army induction stations after being approved by local doctors, and musculo-skeletal defects, including flat feet, also accounted for 11.5 of those turned down.

Other rejection percentages were: Eyes, 8.8; ears, 2.2; dental, 9.2; varicose veins, 0.8; hemorrhoids, 2.3; lungs, 5.3; abdominal, 1.5; hernia, 6.8; genito-urinary diseases and conditions, 6.2; height and weight, 2; and skin conditions, tumors, etc., 3.

LeCraw Dines With Soldiers, Praises Menu

Atlanta's Mayor Visits His Old Outfit; Wants To Rejoin Troops.

Mayor LeCraw wants to get back into the Army.

There's nothing like a good old beef stew to make a man feel like a soldier, Mayor LeCraw said yesterday when he dined with the 30th Division over the weekend, at Fort Jackson, near Columbia, S. C.

Arriving at the reservation Saturday night, Mayor LeCraw was the guest of Lieutenant Colonel John W. Lufuria, the quartermaster at the post, at the regular meal served the 42,000 soldiers.

"When I learned they were serving mulligan I just told them to dig down deep for you know the meat lies near the bottom of the huge pots in which it is cooked," the mayor added. "And it is excellent beef, too. In addition to the meat, the stew had onions, okra, tomatoes and other vegetables. That is considered a balanced diet in itself, but then add mashed potatoes, stewed fruit, bread, jelly and coffee and the quartermaster is really strutting in comparison to what we doughboys of the first World War had."

Is Lieutenant Colonel.

LeCraw, who is a lieutenant colonel on the inactive list, knows something about what it takes to feed boys. He's the quartermaster of his household and his five growing sons have something of the same appetites which the soldiers of the 30th Division have.

Sunday morning Mayor LeCraw sat down with the soldiers to a breakfast of scrambled eggs, bacon, grits, bread, jelly and coffee. "It was deliciously prepared and plenty of it," said the mayor.

"I think the Quartermaster Corps is doing a splendid job in maintaining the morale of the men by feeding them wholesome foods, and prepared and in ample quantity. The food is good enough for anyone and the men have no cause for complaint and what is more they don't complain."

"Colonel Lufuria and his aides take their job seriously and when one analyzes it the Quartermaster's department is one of the most important branches of the service. Men cannot fight or do any job they are supposed to do unless they are fed. I was impressed with what the men are getting."

Contrast With Old Days.

"The contrast with the old days is pronounced. Then we got foods which were regarded as substantial, but it was not nearly so well prepared as now. The menus were limited as to variety and as for fresh fruits and vegetables, we had them only once in a while. These are common on the Army lists."

"In the old days we got hard-tack and other things just to keep us going in the field. Now-a-days it's different. The boys are issued hermetically sealed tins in which they have balanced diets, even while on maneuvers. The slogan is to feed the boys and they'll do the job, and Colonel Lufuria and his aides are giving our potential enemies a body blow in the way they are keeping the troops satisfied."

Seed Group Urges Boll Weevil Fight

An appeal was issued yesterday in Atlanta by the Cotton Seed Crushers' Association of Georgia to farmers to push their fight on boll weevils. One phase of the fight urged is to pick up the squares that fall early.

W. M. Hutchinson, secretary of the association, points out that "boll weevils propagate through the medium of eggs deposited by the females in cotton squares. After the squares have been 'stung' they soon fall to the ground and if not destroyed, more weevils hatch, climb the stalk and begin their destruction along with their elders."

"If these squares are constantly picked up and destroyed, the boll weevil crop will be greatly curtailed."

Hutchinson says boll weevils produce five generations during one summer, if not destroyed. He points out that weevils may be reduced by picking up squares and by dusting with calcium arsenate and by mopping.

Waycross Commission Seeks City Manager

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. WAYCROSS, Ga., July 15.—The Waycross City Commission is asking for applications for a city manager to succeed L. V. Bean, who has been called into service in the United States Army.

Several applications have already been received and it is anticipated many others will come in during the next few days.

Commissioner Sam T. Wright is authorized to sign checks in lieu of the city manager.

The mayor has expressed the hope that a city manager can be elected within a short time as he deems it inadvisable for the city to attempt to operate without an executive head.

Gallup Poll Reveals: War Cost Puzzles Public

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion, Copyright, 1941.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 15.—If all the nation's 50 million voters could be assembled on one radio quiz program and asked how much money the last World War cost the United States, and how many American soldiers were killed, more than 93 people in every 100 would flunk each question, even allowing for the maximum leniency in scoring their answers.

However, even if the general public cannot say exactly how much the World War did cost in men and money, the majority have the distinct impression that the present war would cost the United States a great deal more if she gets into it.

Those facts are revealed in a nation-wide "quiz poll" by the American Institute of Public Opinion from coast to coast. It was conducted among a representative cross-section numbering 3,072 persons, so selected as to represent correctly every group in the voting population.

The results establish the fact that a good many people confuse millions and billions. Of all who ventured a guess on the cost of the last war, a surprising number thought it was less than 100 million dollars, while an equally large group thought it was more than 75 billions. A few actually said the war cost "hundreds of billions" or "several trillions."

The quiz began with this question: "Do you happen to have any idea how much money the United States spent in the first World War?"

The results are:

Yes	15%
No	85%

Only 5 per cent in the quiz named a figure in 19 billion to 45 billion range. Actual cost, including uncollected debts was over 41 billion.

The next question in the survey was: "Do you happen to have any idea how much money the United States spent in the first World War?"

Replies were:

Yes	21%
No	79%

Army and Navy records show 37,568 killed in action and 12,942 deaths from wounds received in action, or a total of 50,510 dead.

In the quiz, however, only 6 per cent named a figure between 40,000 and 60,000.

For the territory that includes Atlanta, the median gain over last year has recently been 43.5 per cent for concentration sales activities, for collections and other promotion operations of business, the magazine stated. Fifteen other near-by cities make up the Atlanta territory.

What of Japan?

The Japanese government has closed the important port of Kobe to foreigners for a period of ten days. Immediately speculation as to what is afoot ran rife through military and diplomatic circles of the Far East, and there is new unease that the Japanese are preparing to launch a new blow in their role as an imperialistic aggressive partner in the infamous Axis.

The most probable move would be an attack on Indo-China and Thailand, as prelude for a campaign against the Netherlands East Indies, with its important oil and rubber resources.

Presumably, too, the Japanese are under the impression that both Britain and the United States are too occupied in the Atlantic to do anything effective to block their plans. They must see, at this time, their supreme opportunity for that long-desired empire expansion to the south.

However, if the Japanese think their road to the East Indies will be comparatively easy, they are probably in for a rude awakening. The Japanese have, ever since the Russo-Japanese war of nearly half a century ago, had an exaggerated idea of their own militaristic prowess. If the Japanese navy runs up against even a comparatively small segment of the British war fleet, such as that squadron now based at Singapore, the probability is they will suffer a naval setback from which they cannot hope to recover for years. To say nothing of the presence in nearby waters of considerable units of the United States Navy which would not be likely to stand idly by and see the Yellow threat expand too far.

The Chinese have stood off the Japanese invaders for four years and are far from defeat. In fact, it is more likely than not that, in due time, the Chinese will emerge victors from this conflict. Japan will be blind to her own interests and utterly foolhardy if she attempts any new armed "incidents" at this time.

Although Kobe is the logical port from which a force aimed at Indo-China would embark.

A Pennsylvanian who was given a transfusion of his own blood awhile back is now as good as ever. It shows what the rugged American can do, if they get off his neck.

The Soap Box Derby

Next Saturday the annual Soap Box Derby will be run in Atlanta. Down the course on Moreland avenue the home-made racers, with their youthful drivers, will speed. Many thousands will watch and the winners will experience that supreme thrill that comes with victory in an important contest.

The Constitution, which has sponsored this annual event in Atlanta for many years, takes high pride in the manner in which the youthful contestants conduct themselves before, during and after the races. They are, invariably, good sportsmen in victory or in defeat and the way they react to changing fortunes could provide a needed object lesson to many older persons.

The Soap Box Derby is typical of American boyhood. In little racers, propelled solely by gravity, each home built, they compete for honors and prizes of great value. They learn, in the construction of their entries, much of the secrets of streamlining, of wind obstruction and of the qualities of speed.

Any Atlantans who have not yet witnessed a Soap Box Derby have missed something really fine. Go out, Saturday, to Moreland avenue and see boys, winners of the elimination tests in other north Georgia towns, compete with Atlanta boys who have won the local eliminations, for the chance to represent this territory in the national finals that will be held at Akron.

You'll see astonishing speed, brilliant achievement and, above all, superlatively good sportsmanship. And, if you've ever thought that American ingenuity is fading, look at the speedsters built by these boys and be reassured.

Our tax framers in congress propose to take

$25 a year out of each slot machine, which is O. K. if they don't play it back into the machine.

Circumstances Alter Cases

There has been considerable furore, by those who consider it their patriotic duty to criticize everything President Roosevelt does and thereby to impede this nation's defense program, about the establishment of United States defense forces in Iceland.

These self-appointed critics have quoted campaign statements by both President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie, not to send American troops to fight on foreign soil. They would infer that a solemn pledge has been broken by the Iceland incident and are beating the air and tearing their hair accordingly.

What these political opportunists forget is that circumstances always alter cases. They forget that the world situation today is far different from what it was during the presidential campaign. They overlook the self-evident fact that, with the evil Nazi force loose in the world, conditions change overnight and what was unnecessary a week ago may well be vital to national safety tomorrow.

General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, has urged that the term of service for selectees, and for National Guardsmen, be extended beyond the one year contemplated when they were first called to army training. Again, the vociferous few are asserting this is a breaking of a solemn pledged to the men in uniform.

They forget, once more, the changing world conditions. And they forget, too, the temper of the vast majority of the men now training, selectees, guardsmen and volunteers alike. That great majority not only went willingly and gladly to secure the training needed if they were ever to be called upon to protect this nation, but went with the clear knowledge they would proudly respond to any future call if their nation needed them.

If, as now seems logical, their nation needs them for a longer period of service than one year, they will gladly give that longer service and feel great pride in their ability thus to help in their nation's defense.

Once again the obstructionists have proven themselves vastly ignorant of the spirit of the people who are America, once again the President and his advisers are proving themselves magnificent interpreters of the will of the people.

That spirit and that will tell to the President that he is wise in securing such outer defenses as Iceland. And, what is more, if the developing strategy indicates the wisdom of even further moves, the people will approve those also.

For the nation as a whole knows that its future existence depends upon the crushing of Hitler and Nazidom and it is prepared to accept any decision from the White House as to the best means of assuring that crushing as early as possible.

The people trust the President and are with him in any move that changing circumstances may indicate as wise, regardless of what looked like wisdom under different circumstances a month, or a year, ago.

A local figure who used to be a bank vice president in charge of vice presidents would like to catch on in Washington co-ordinating the co-ordinators.

George F. Hunnicutt

There were few better known men in the agricultural counties of Georgia than George Frederick Hunnicutt, who died on Monday night at the ripe age of 80 years.

Mr. Hunnicutt for many years was editor of The Southern Cultivator, succeeding his father, Dr. James Benjamin Hunnicutt, in that capacity. From boyhood he absorbed an intense interest in the agricultural problems of Georgia and the southeast. His father was, at one time, commissioner of agriculture for the state and the son was likewise a candidate, though unsuccessful, for that office.

A quiet and unassuming man, he devoted his life to the uplifting of the manner of living on the farms of Georgia and contributed immensely to the encouragement of better farming methods. He was known in every county to the great majority of its people and, though numbering friends by the thousands, had scarcely an enemy.

His was a career which could rightfully be described as a lifetime of unselfish service to his fellow citizens. Perhaps not as well publicized as many others, George F. Hunnicutt nevertheless contributed as much, if not more, than any other man of his time to the betterment of life in the rural areas of Georgia.

No longer does the voice come over the radio, "monkeys is the craziest people," which is just as well. After looking over the cable news, the monkeys would resent it.

Georgia Editors Say:

THE HOME TOWN NEWSPAPER.
(From The Waycross Journal-Herald)
A survey conducted in the Army camps and Navy camps shows that all of those in training earnestly desire their home town newspaper to be sent them.

This is not surprising.
Many of these young men are planning to return to their home towns after the emergency ends. They wish to keep up with events so as to be in better position to take up civilian life again. Also, the majority of the friends of these young men live in their home towns. They enjoy keeping up with the friends and in this way maintaining the ties that bind them to their friends.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

IMPRACTICABILITY WASHINGTON, July 15.—It is now apparent that the limitation of one year's active service placed on trainees under the National Selective Service Act was tainted with the same degree of impracticability as found in stringent provisions of the original neutrality act which congress was later forced to revise in the face of growing war realities.

As courageous as it was for congress to pass the act with the 1940 presidential campaign in the offing, there nevertheless is a suspicion that too much political expediency was allowed to creep into the framing of some of its provisions.

Certainly the limitation of one year's active service softened the liability of the bill's supporters, whether it was designed for such or not. But the restriction against sending newly trained selectees outside the western hemisphere was nothing more than the isolationism, who put up the same fight on the Selective Service Act as they have on practically every other defense measure.

IMPERFECTIONS SHOW UP In the light of developments that have occurred in our defense program since then, the imperfections of the act are patent. It now embraces a more far-flung system than contemplated in the mere building up of a standing Army of some 1,500,000 men, about 1,000,000 of whom were to be released every 12 months to make room for a new quota of selectees.

At the time the act was passed, for example, it could not be foreseen that we would acquire the half dozen important strategic air bases off our shores from Great Britain involved in the trade of 50 destroyers. Nor was it anticipated that we would see the need for taking over Iceland with the consequent necessity of establishing an outpost base requiring several divisions of our troops to man.

Therein lies the crux of the act's imperfections. As constituted today our Army of 1,448,500, according to latest War Department figures, consists of 508,700 regulars, 287,800 National Guardsmen, now in the federal service; 597,000 selective service trainees, and 55,000 reserve officers.

Both the selective service trainees and the National Guardsmen are restricted by the provision of law that they cannot be sent out of the western hemisphere and are limited to one year's active service.

IMPRACTICAL HANDICAP While the restriction as to western hemisphere service does not prevent this class of our forces from being sent to Bermuda, Hawaii, Alaska, Central America or the new Iceland base, the limitation of a year's service does offer an impractical handicap.

General George Marshall, Army chief of staff, has well pointed out that if the year's limit of service is continued it means that we will have to resort to a shuttle service to keep these outpost bases manned. Selectees are trained and equipped to take over such service, half of his period of enlistment would have ended. He wouldn't be stationed at one of the bases long enough to get the swing of things before it would be time to send him back.

Obviously the requirements call for the best trained men to be stationed at these ocean outposts. They are to be our first line of shore defense. A constant turnover as involved in the year limitation of service would be conducive to extreme inefficiency. The only alternative would be to use regular troops who are bound by neither the western hemisphere restriction nor the limit of 12 months' enlistment.

TOO FEW REGULARS But there are hardly enough regular troops to meet the demands of the situation. At the Iceland base alone we are reported to be using some 80,000 men. The requirements of Bermuda, Alaska, Hawaii and others in the South American and Caribbean zone may not be so large individually, yet collectively they would be enough to absorb the greater part of regular forces.

If we employ all of our seasoned regular troops in outpost duty there would be only a small nucleus left to train selective service men as they come along.

Still another problem presents itself in connection with the question. Army officials have pointed out that in training the new men it has been necessary to mix them up with regulars. After a year's training they are so well mixed up that it would be all but impossible to unscramble them.

Without the requested changes in the act to permit longer service of selective service trainees and National Guardsmen, Army heads say the strong fortifications of Hawaii and elsewhere would be seriously interfered with through the necessity of returning and discharging men on duty there. There might be great difficulty also in sending an adequate force to Iceland to carry out the country's pledge to protect the island.

In short, as General Marshall is reported to feel, refusal of congress to keep the draftees and guardsmen might well near wreck the Army. There is sound basis for his insistence that congress must heed the advice of the general staff on military matters if it is to be held responsible for the country's safety.

Minnesotans

And Georgians

The recent shame that has been forced upon Georgia by a governor who did not hesitate to stir up the basest of human passions, in order to provide campaign material for his next race for public office, and the attitude of the governor of Minnesota and the United States senators from that state provide a contrast that makes the record of Georgia the darker by contrast.

Here we have a governor who crucified two of the state's leading educators, who made a Roman holiday out of their martyrdom, who proclaimed himself champion of a cause that existed only in his own unscrupulous imagination.

In Minnesota there is a governor and a senator who are espousing a cause which in that state is admitted by all observers to be politically unpopular, yet these two men know the cause they back is just and both would sooner go down in political defeat than be false to their conscience.

It is an interesting study in types of public men as far apart as the poles. It provides an example of the sort of public servants the people should choose and those they, unfortunately, too frequently do elect.

Governor Stassen

And Senator Ball

Stassen and Harold E. Stassen and Senator Joseph R. Ball represent a state which, with the possible exception of North Dakota, is the most isolationist, pacifist and anti-British of any. With a population largely German and Irish, with a fair sprinkling of Finns and some of the Scandinavian countries, Minnesota is the most bitterly anti-British of any state in the Union.

Last year Senator Shipstead, the senior senator from the state, ran for re-election on an isolationist platform and carried 84 out of a total of 87 counties. Wendell Willkie, supporting all-out aid to Britain, lost the state by 48,000 votes. Stassen was re-elected, but his former plurality of 291,000 was cut to 195,000, whereas Shipstead won by 321,000.

Stassen is running for a third term, next year. Ball is seeking election to the senate for the full term, after he was appointed by Stassen to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Lundeen.

Ball has just completed his first speech-making tour of his state. And, everywhere, he frankly told his constituents, whether they liked it or not, that Hitler can't be beaten without American armed participation, at least in the naval war on the Atlantic, and added that he would vote for such participation if President Roosevelt asks congress to authorize it.

And the reaction of his hearers was such he is not sure how they took it. He says they listened to his speeches mostly in silence, with neither applause nor disapproval. He says far more came to the platform after each speech to commend him than to disagree.

And both Ball and Stassen know that, in supporting the aid to Britain and the war policies of the administration, they are choosing the hardest road to re-election, even if they succeed. It would be easy to spout for isolationism and be returned.

Yet their consciences will not permit this. They are convinced they are right and have deliberately decided they would rather return to the private practice of law, in Stassen's case, or to pounding a typewriter in a newspaper office, in the case of Ball.

For even if they lost they will be at peace with their consciences, whereas, if they followed the path of political expediency, they might win re-election without difficulty, but they could not sleep properly at night or look honest men in the face without blushing.

Center of Isolationism.
It is perhaps because of a combination of geographic and population conditions that a few states of the midwest are where practically all the isolationist sentiment exists.

Slies nearer the coasts, either Atlantic or Pacific, know the danger better. They are aware, awake to the threat that looms before this country in event Hitler wins the war. They know that the outer defenses of the United States are the islands of the Atlantic and the outposts in the Pacific, such as Iceland, Azores, Cape Verde and, yes, the British Isles. The Philippines.

Racial origins, of course, are the basis for the active anti-British sentiment in such states as Minnesota, German and Irish. And, since the German attack on Russia, the Finns. Though they do say there are enough Russians to offset the Finns, at least.

But it is strange that a state like Minnesota should produce two officeholders who put conscience above expediency, whereas old Georgia is forced to see a shameful witch hunt in her capitol halls and a Hitlerlike appeal to racial prejudice.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Summer Reading NEW YORK, July 15.—Offhand, it may be hard to imagine a more dreary item for summer reading than an official circular of the United States Bureau of Mines of the Department of Interior, but as today's offset against the propaganda of the Communist conspiracy against American industry I cite from such a document issued last January. The Communist in American journalism is most deceptive and effective when he gets a job with a paper purporting to be an American publication, for he then has an opportunity to distort and falsify for a larger and more trusting circulation than he could reach through the columns of, say, the Daily Worker.

Why publishers who purport to be Americans, as distinguished from Mussaites, employ as reporters and writers men and women known to them to be Communists or consistent fellow-travelers, and why they do not fire such individuals and be damned to the Labor Relations Board, considering that the government itself claims the right to do so in the interest of national safety, one may ask but never learn.

The publishers have free access to the public mind and could go to the people with their case with a certainty of being upheld. Instead, however, they seem to regard as a private, household fight the attempt of the Communists to control and class-angle the news, forgetting that the free press is not only theirs but everybody's.

Mine Propaganda

Within the past year a considerable stir was created by propaganda purporting to show that mine disasters were due to the greed and inhuman indifference of soulless corporations which operate mines at the lack of legislation to make them guard better the lives of men engaged in an occupation which is extremely dangerous at best.

The needs of laws to protect miners from risks which can be reduced by compulsory safety measures will be generally acknowledged, but the fact that miners themselves have been responsible for many of their own disasters has not received appropriate emphasis in this obscure mimeographed document of the Bureau of Mines, which, being a political principal of the empire of Harold F. Ickes, certainly cannot be suspected of partiality to American free industry.

This paper says that "men engaged in the hazardous occupation of mining indulge with the utmost indifference" in the habit of smoking "under circumstances that may jeopardize not only their own lives but those of scores of hundreds—of their fellow-workers as well. The old adage that stolen sweets are the best when applied to the practice of smoking surreptitiously in a coal mine, especially in a gassy mine, is without even remote foundation."

"Smoking," says the circular, "has been the cause or the suspected cause of many gas explosions and black powder ignitions and has resulted in numerous instances of injury, loss of life and destruction of property. Many fires in both coal and metal mines, causing loss of life, have been caused by smoking."

At Least Three Cases

The circular then cites that in the first seven months of 1940 there were at least three ignitions, "possibly as a result of smoking," and adds that between 1939 and 1939 ignition from either open lights or smoking was responsible for 23.7 per cent of the mine explosions of which records are available. Of 130 explosions in the Alabama mines 76.9 per cent are attributed to open lights and smoking. The bureau admits its inability to determine exactly how many disasters were caused by smoking and how many by open lights, but says that for more than 100 years these have been important causes of disastrous mine explosions.

The circular says the conclusion definitely is supported that smoking caused an explosion in Bartley, W. Va., on January 10, 1940, in which 91 men were killed. Although the men were searched daily for matches and smokers' articles, cigarettes were found in a miner's jacket, and the circular holds this to indicate strongly that this man and probably others smoked in the mine that day.

Enforcement of laws and rules against smoking is difficult, the circular grants. Miners' lunch buckets, between slices of bread, in their thermos bottles, and the responsibility of miners for disasters is bluntly summed up in an official finding of the Bureau of Mines that "the laws and regulations against smoking are being violated with impunity, causing much needless loss of life."

Word Stories

By W. Worthington Wells

"He was a stout, amiable-looking gentleman, with the benevolent appearance of a cat that has just made away with a platter of finnan haddie." (K. Roberts, "Northwest Passage.")

Benevolent is an adjective pronounced be-nev-o-lent, with the accent on the second syllable. (Be) is like that in because, (nev) is the same as that in never, (o) like that in obey and (lent) as spelled. I don't know just how a cat would manage to look benevolent, but it is a beautiful figure of speech. A benevolent person is supposed to be one who has the appearance of being at peace with all of his neighbors and the rest of the world. One who engenders peace, happiness and goodwill. One who is devoid of selfishness and wishes everyone the best of luck. As: A benevolent disposition; benevolent neutrality; benevolent thoughts.

A benevolent despot is an absolute ruler whose every act is for the benefit of those he rules. All of us should be more benevolently minded toward our less fortunate associates.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

HEALTH NOTES This may be as good a time as any to call attention to the fact that we have 45 cases of polio in Fulton county and Atlanta. The number is not alarming, but is not comforting.

You will be asked in January to give money to the polio fund at the time of the President's birthday. That money is divided fifty-fifty, the state keeping half of it and half going to the fund for research and for clinics and so on.

Georgia has done a good job with her half. The fund is doing a good job. Part of your money which left the state is coming back, paying the costs of investigations and research into the present cases.

I call attention to it now because there will be a campaign in January and by then you will have forgotten that we had a near epidemic in the hot months of the summer.

Money is needed because no one knows much about this disease. Money is needed for care of the patients, but certainly a good share of it is needed for research. They've got to find out what causes it. They've got to keep working, giving rats and monkeys the disease and then watching them, experimenting with them, making slides of their nervous systems, their brains, their muscles.

If they ever find out what causes it they will then be able to prevent it as they now prevent smallpox or diphtheria or any of the dozen or more diseases which now may be prevented by a shot in the arm.

So, you might keep this in mind when January comes around and the annual appeal for money is made. The money is used honestly and efficiently in the separate states and in the nation generally.

ALWAYS A FIGHT Research men constantly are working at this and other problems. One experiment after another is attempted. In polio thousands and thousands of trials have been made.

Once they thought sprays of the nose and throat would do the job. Now they know they are valueless.

They just don't know anything about it. Maybe it is breathed in through the nose or mouth. Maybe it comes from dirty hands or from food. No one knows.

About the best advice is to keep up one's resistance. Don't let children get too tired. That applies also to adults.

Polio is no respecter of age or wealth. It is true, as it is true in anything else, that poor sections seem to get the most of it. That is because they are crowded together and also because, too often, their chances to have sanitation and cleanliness are nil.

There is no need for panic. There is no need to listen to rumors or sensational stories. They aren't true. There is no epidemic. There are a larger number of cases than usual. But we've had more. It may stop as quickly as it came.

Meanwhile, keep in mind the fact that this happens in many cities and counties.

When next January comes and the appeal is made for aid, don't consider it as something afar off and not close to you.

It is one of our problems. It requires research. And research requires money.

DRAFTEE REPORT Georgia's state selective service headquarters yesterday released its report through May 31.

It is another chapter in a very frightening fact. In Georgia, as in other states, due to poor diets, poverty and lack of health units in the state, almost half the young men between the ages of 21 and 35 are not physically fit to serve in the Army.

The Georgia report shows that 41.5 per cent of the white registrants had been turned down because of physical defects and that 52 per cent of the colored registrants had been refused for the same cause.

This disturbing fact ought to be the chief challenge for our leaders. It is considerably more important, socially and economically, than any other single problem we have. It is tied up with all our problems.

If about half our young men are physically unfit, what of our middle-aged groups?

What are the youngsters missing in the years before 21 that brings them in with bad teeth, infected throats, hernias, bad hearts and other defects?

This has been going on for years and years. I doubt if it can be cured by anything except intelligent study and care.

I also doubt if anything at all will be done about it. It isn't important to those who decide what shall occupy the state and its departments.

You Can't Appreciate Water Until You Have Known the Torture of Thirst

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Several of the younger members of Hoover's Commission to Belgium resigned in 1917, when America entered the war, and were permitted to return home by way of Germany and Switzerland.

In Belgium they had been honored guests and privileged characters, treated with courtesy even by the German officers who watched over them with endless suspicion. But they had known every moment that unfriendly eyes were watching their every move and unfriendly ears listening to their every word, and they had simply quit talking about dangerous subjects and kept their thoughts to themselves.

Not until they reached Switzerland did they realize what a strain they had lived under. But once on Swiss soil, where they could express any opinion without fear, their hearts sang with the joy of freedom.

One of them, discussing the matter later, said no American could possibly appreciate the privilege of freedom unless he had sometime lived where freedom was denied.

That is tragically true. It is simply impossible to realize what others suffer unless you have shared it.

Forty years ago, when the Army was much tougher than it is now and every second non-com was a German trained in the old country, a proud and spoiled boy who never had known a superior enlisted in search of adventure.

He made his first acquaintance with caste—from the lower end. He got to his feet and removed his hat in the presence of an officer. He couldn't speak to an officer without permission. His rebellious imagination made it worse than it was, but the system was gall and wormwood to his soul. He knew how the members of a despised class or race feel under the lash of a superior's casual contempt. He learned how under-dogs feel.

It would be a priceless boon to all Americans if they could live for three months under the heel of an arrogant master—if they could learn how it feels to blaze with resentment and not dare to speak; to whisper their opinions lest a spy overhear and report them; to endure impudence, insult and brazen injustice with pretended meekness while murderous hatred burns in their hearts.

Then they would appreciate freedom. Then they would be willing to fight and die for the right to speak aloud and again feel equal to any man on earth.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

Dudley Glass

It is recognized by scientists and musicians that it's vibration that makes the world go round. Popular song of a past era said it was love, but that theory has never passed the acid test of matrimony, alimony and no money.

If you hang a well-tuned violin from the chandelier and strike the A key on an equally well-tuned piano, the A string of the violin will vibrate in unison with the piano. Or so they say. It is my custom to test out all scientific theories before presenting them in this column, lest I lead some innocent mind astray. But I must take this one on the testimony of others. Because I have no violin. And no piano. Now the subject has come up, I remember I have no chandelier, either.

With these few words of introduction, designed to hold your breathless attention, shall get into the crux of my complaint.

Several times I have voiced a futile protest over the whistling of a locomotive or locomotives which navigate the railroad a half-mile from my home.

The whistle still whistles. I am resigned to that. But I'm going to call on the high officials of the railroad and offer a compromise.

They can continue to whistle the whistle if that is necessary under the federal constitution. But I shall ask—and go to court if I have to—that the whistle be tuned up a little or down a little.

Because its sonorous and melancholy note vibrates in some way on the sensitive ear of my dog Ding, who sleeps on the back porch—or should sleep. He does, except when that whistle blows.

When the whistle sounds off so does Ding. He feels impelled to sing, in accurate unison with that siren sound. He has an excellent ear. Two of them, both long and floppy and slightly fringed at the edges where his twin brother chewed them.

The whistle whistles for a couple of miles or perhaps a couple of minutes. And Ding arises from his handwoven rug and gives vent to the call of the wild. I don't know where he gets all that breath, but he can hold the note until the train is half-way to Gainesville. After which, I assume, he goes back to sleep. But I can't.

I do not wish to be unreasonable about this matter. I am always willing to meet anybody half way. But it is manifestly impossible for me to handle the situation from my end.

It would seem a simple matter to tune a locomotive whistle, one way or the other.

But how in heck do you set about tuning a pup? I have consulted several veterinarians but they insist it's not in their books. "Smorgasbord."

The "smorgasbord" appears to have come into popular favor in the last year. One of the hotels pulled a party around it during the last opera engagement and I understand it went over in a big way.

Reader who suffers under the idea this is a column of encyclopedia information, postcards to learn what a "smorgasbord" is and why, I'll try to tell her and I may be wrong. The "smorgas-

How To Tune a Dog; Of If You Can't, Tune the Whistle

I was brought up on was at the end of a bar. If you bought a nickel beer—and could produce the nickel—you could pitch in. We called it a free lunch. And it saved many a chap from perishing from malnutrition.

The "smorgasbord" as we knew it, consisted of a huge bowl of coleslaw, a platter of tiny smoked herrings, a few slices of cheese, a liberal assortment of pickles and a dish full of oyster crackers. The forks and spoons were kept immaculately sterile by being inserted in a tumbler full of water before and after use.

Several years ago a friend in New York invited us—my domestic executive and me—to dine at a Norwegian restaurant, pretty well down town. The dinner—no cover charge—was $1.50, per customer.

We were served knife and fork and spoon and large plates—about as big as platters. But nothing else. Our host suggested we pick up plate and fork and take a stroll around the "smorgasbord." Which we did.

It was a table, about as big around as a night club dance floor. And it was loaded with this and that. Smoked fish and deviled this and pickled that. You never saw so many kinds of good eating in your life. Things we'd never seen—but they looked good.

We loaded up before we'd get half way around and took our plates back to our seats. But we couldn't quite finish the last bits. We thought it was time to go see a show.

"But you haven't had dinner," protested our host. "It's coming right along. Oh, here's Ole now. Dinner! By Zeus and Mercury and Isis and all the prophets! Dinner! On top of that. Soup and fish and an entree and—well, I can't remember all of it. I felt I was growing white under the gills."

"The Norwegians are great consumers of food," remarked my host, dipping into his soup. "They must be," I retorted. "Do you come here often? Is that why you've lost your figure? Can you sit there, after all that free lunch banquet and talk about dinner? I am filled until my collar chokes me."

"Just a few moments," he returned. "There's plenty of time for the show. I'm waiting for the dessert—a fine, rich Norwegian pudding. You'll like it."

Draft Lottery Dollar Keeps Is Scheduled Chinese Child For Tomorrow For One Month

16,749 Young Georgians To Be Assigned Sequence Numbers.

Sequence numbers for 16,749 young Georgians who registered July 1 will be drawn from the historic fishbowl in Washington at 7 o'clock tomorrow night in the second national draft lottery.

The drawing will determine the order in which an estimated 700,000 new registrants in the nation will be integrated into the list of men registered last October 16.

Brigadier General Sion B. Hawkins, state director of selective service, pointed out yesterday that the lottery will not determine the final order of numbers to correspond with the bodies of the registrants. These will be assigned as they are integrated into the list, he said.

"For example, if a local board should happen to have 10 new registrants and 100 old registrants, one new man would be placed after each group of 10 old registrants."

Eight hundred numbers will be drawn tomorrow in Washington from the fishbowl used both in the first World War draft lottery and the selective service lottery last October. The highest number of registrants on any Georgia board is 327 at board No. 2, Muscogee county.

The numbers to be drawn will be placed in nonflammable capsules, melon-colored to correspond with the July 1 registration cards. A screw cap has been provided to prevent the capsules from becoming detached when stirred in the fishbowl, officials said.

Draft Makes 'Every Third Dance a Waltz'

ARNOLDS PARK, Iowa, July 15.—(AP)—Members of the mid-western Ballroom Operators' Association agreed today the draft means the death sentence for hot swing music but is reviving the waltz.

"With a million and a half young men in the Army, we find that middle-aged patrons make up an increasingly large proportion of our customers," explained Tom Archer, of Des Moines. "This means more and more sweet music rather than swing. At one of our ballrooms we are already advertising 'every third dance a waltz.'"

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

"Do right. Behave yourself. Believe God. Be happy."

With center shots like that, one after another, Dr. Bascom Anthony preached to an appreciative congregation at Druid Hills Baptist church last Sunday night, taking the Fourth Psalm as his text. Seated in an arm chair, the picturesque prophet declared the whole counsel of God, and the people listened, knowing that they were in the presence of a man who spoke with authority—the authority of one who believes implicitly in the Word of the Lord, and who, throughout his long ministry, has sought diligently to win people to the will and way of God.

In Atlanta over the weekend on his way to Clayton for a rest in the hills before going to Salem camp meeting in August, Dr. Anthony agreed to preach for our people Sunday night. There were friends present from widely scattered parts of the city—old-time friends, and more recent friends who heard him when he preached at Druid Hills last summer. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vanderscough, of Sebring, Fla., said to be the oldest couple in Florida. They have been married 69 years. How many couples do we have in Georgia who have been married 67 years. How many couples do we have in Georgia who have been married longer than that?

"Do right when you are in a hard place," said Dr. Anthony, "even as David did right when Saul was trying to kill him. Do right when it looks like it is going to be to your disadvantage, even as David did. And you will

Leader Hopes Thousand Atlanta Women Will Aid 'Warphans.'

Would anybody give a dollar to keep a Chinese "warphan" for a month? A "warphan" is a Chinese child whose home has been destroyed, and its parents killed. Hundreds are found after each Japanese bombing raid. They are an ever-growing army.

China, doggedly fighting, is caring for them as best she can. But money is needed. And yesterday Mrs. Forrest Adair III, in a letter to George W. West, chairman of the Atlanta China Relief Committee, said:

"I hope that 1,000 Atlanta women will become foster-parents-for-a-month to some helpless Chinese child. The plight of these little ones, found along the roadsides, or huddled beside the bodies of their parents in their bombed homes, clutches at the hearts of those who love children."

Those who wish to contribute may send checks or cash to the headquarters of the Atlanta China Relief Committee at 46 Pryor street, N. E. All funds received will be turned over to the American Committee for Chinese War Orphans, and to the China Aid Council.

In China the orphanages that have already been set up care for the children, carry on their education, and attempt, if possible, to reunite them with their parents. Each American dollar, it was pointed out, increases ten times in buying power when translated into Chinese funds.

Atlanta Is Honest, Air Visitor Thinks

Mrs. Jessie Beall, wife of an American oil man employed in South America, thinks Atlantans are honest folks.

Mrs. Beall stopped off yesterday at Candler Airport for a few hours, en route to her home in Long Beach, Cal., from Venezuela. She left her purse—containing $400 and her plane tickets—on a window sill in a rest room at the airport.

Forgetting the purse, she went to a movie. Midway in the show, she discovered the missing purse and hurried back to the rest room. The purse, its contents undisturbed, was still there.

New Wrinkle In 'Flim-Flam' Game Revealed

Travelers Being Gyped for Fake Transportation, Bradford Says.

City Detective R. R. Bradford is looking for a will-o'-the-wisp "ticket agent" who has introduced a new wrinkle into the age-old art of flim-flam.

According to Bradford, the suspect, a young Negro, approaches other Negroes in the waiting rooms of the Terminal station and the bus station inquiring their place of destination.

Upon learning their place of destination he explains that it is right along his route and he will take them in his car for half-fare.

After finding prospective "passengers" arrangements are completed and he takes the fare with which to buy gasoline, places their luggage in the back of an automobile parked on the street or in the plaza and makes them comfortable in the car, instructing them to wait until he can obtain some tobacco.

Several hours later the owner of the automobile returns to find the somewhat bewildered but still unsuspecting Negroes, surrounded by luggage, patiently waiting for the return of their driver.

The "ticket agent" of course, has vanished.

Bradford says this occurrence has been repeated several times during the past two weeks, and also many complaints have been received from motorists on finding the "travelers" in their car.

Irving Berlin's 'Bonds' Song Offered Free

Part of Program To Make State 'Defense Savings Conscious.'

Music of Irving Berlin's latest patriotic song, "Any Bonds Today?", is now available without cost to school, college or other bands in Georgia.

This was announced yesterday by Marion Allen, state administrator of the defense saving staff, and Arthur Cheatham, deputy administrator, who was appointed to his post last week and has now assumed his duties.

Allen, collector of internal revenue, said the music will be furnished as part of the state-wide program to make "everybody in Georgia defense savings bond and stamp conscious."

Besides the sheet music, there is available for radio stations a recording of "Any Bonds Today?" and another Berlin number, "Arms for the Love of America."

Cheatham's office, where literature, posters and information is available, is on the second floor of the old post office building.

The Pulse of the Public

The Constitution invites expression of opinion by its readers. This column is open for that purpose. All communications must be signed and all are subject to editing for conservation of space. Brevity makes argument effective and impels attention.

TALMADGE ATTITUDE SAID MISINTERPRETED

Editor, Constitution: In discussing the alleged suggestion of a professor in the state university, that a training school be built "within 30 minutes' drive of Athens, for both whites and blacks" it seems to be a purpose of some of the papers to misinterpret the born-in-Georgia attitude of Governor Talmadge, in selecting teachers. Let us look at the record:

The teacher under criticism (Cocking) is a native of Iowa. In pursuing his inquiry of the quoted views of this member of the university faculty, the Governor requested the state auditor to "furnish him a list of all these foreign (not "furrin") professors in the state university system," and said:

"We are going to have a little fun," and, when asked if this meant he planned to purge the state colleges of all non-Georgia professors, said, "I ain't saying (quoting the press verbatim), what I am going to do. I'm going to look them over, and those who have been bragging about the big salaries they could get elsewhere I'm going to help get bigger salaries. I never did think these foreign professors were smarter than our own Georgians."

I haven't conferred with Governor Talmadge, as to what he meant by these quoted words. In fact, have not been in his presence, as long as 10 minutes, since his inauguration as Governor. What he meant, is a matter of interpretation by foe and friend. This is the way it seems to me:

Governor Talmadge felt that no man who holds the views as to racial mixture in our schools, accredited to Professor Cocking, should be connected with the system—and since his bolstering friends made it appear that he could get more pay elsewhere, he would find a way for him, and possibly others like unto him, (he used the plural pronoun), to get the "bigger" salary.

The Governor wanted to know where these teachers were born, and how long they had lived in Georgia, with a view to ascertaining whether they thought enough of the state that was making it possible for them to live in comfort, to qualify as citizens, and to help other Georgians, natives and former residents of other states, build up Georgia, and uphold Georgia traditions. Our constitution makes citizenship a prerequisite to holding office, and this is true of the other states. All safeguards should be thrown around a system which educates the child that is to hold the office; and if these traditions are not upheld, the state is lost, and 'twere better the child had not been born.

What is a foreigner? The dictionary says, "an unnaturalized citizen of foreign birth." Governor Talmadge could not have had this definition in mind as Professor Cocking, for he was born in Iowa. The dictionary also speaks of a foreigner as "an outsider." A teacher from another state, holding views, or proposing to inculcate ideas that tend to undermine traditions in his transitory home state, is an outsider, or the reason, he would be doing that which is foreign to the society and to the inheritance of the people of his adopted home.

I think any teacher, who comes to Georgia, from another state, should identify himself with the life and tradition of the that constitute his or her new environment. One should become a citizen before holding office. Governor Talmadge invokes the terms of our state constitution. Efficiency being the test, other things being equal, he prefers a citizen of Georgia, to a citizen of Iowa or other state, as a teacher in our schools. If there is a Governor any state of the Union who is not so actuated let the people name him. If there is an editor in this state, who differs with this view of statehood, I challenge him to so declare his attitude to the people of Georgia. Let's not hedge, in debate. Let's toe the mark.

The World calls it PROGRESS!

GRANDPA and grandma simply didn't know anything about home insulation, automatic furnaces, electric washing machines, radios, modern furniture, automobiles.

* Such things, if they were invented at all, were "new."

How does the news of new things travel? How is it that one day all our homes lack some useful piece of equipment and almost the next day millions are buying and using the new product?

Along comes a newspaper. It tells Mr. and Mrs. U. S. A. all about new things. This is part of the service a paper renders, just as much as is the reporting of fires, elections or baseball games.

But news about products doesn't stop with what the reporters and editors say. Along come manufacturers and merchants. And in their advertising they describe and offer their goods. The banks and the finance companies and the power companies and others add their help by telling us how we may finance new things we want or save up to buy them.

Over in the "Classified" section of the newspaper we find offers of jobs and bids for work by which we can earn the money to buy the things we want.

Put all this together and you have Business, American style. Keep it together and you find millions of nice folks with nice, comfortable, well-equipped homes. There is still room for improvement. Our freedom of speech and freedom of choice in America may be occasionally abused. But some pretty good U. S. horse sense seems to tell us that Russian "five-year plans" and German "New Orders" and other short cuts are mighty apt to lead through the thorn patch, instead of down the good old American Road to home sweet home!

Climax Blethen Finally Reaches Top—in Story

Former Cracker Hurler, 48, Now in 31st Season of Baseball.

Here's one for the books. This year at the great baseball age of 48, Climax Blethen is in his 31st year of professional ball. Except for two brief visits to the majors for tryouts, he's spent his entire career in the bushes, which includes a fling with the Atlanta Crackers. But if Blethen never reached the majors, at least he has reached the limelight, for this week he receives national recognition in an article by Ted Shane in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

It was when Climax was playing with the Knoxville Smokies in an exhibition game against the New York Yankees on April 10, 1935, that James P. Dawson, of the New York Times, thought Blethen a "young rookie." But don't think too harshly of Dawson. Even some scouts have never heard of Climax. "Climax Blethen? What play's he from?" they say.

Climax doesn't drink and doesn't smoke and disapproves of more than a dinner highball for anybody. He chews tobacco only during ball games. He once quit the filthy weed, but began to lose his stuff on the mound. He's never made that mistake again. Frequently he's been called on to run for players 20 years younger than himself. He's never had a serious illness or operation.

The only time he ever lost his temper was one day when a couple of fans in Knoxville unjustly blamed him for a poor play. It happened while he was coaching at third base, and they began yelling unkind remarks: "Bring on the undertaker and bury the Old Man" and "Blethen's so old, he can't remember." Stung to the core, Blethen's only action was to shout back, "Pipe down, you Sunday fans, you!"

He's never made much money. He has a lifetime average of about $300 a month for five playing months a year. His tops was $400. Though he's happy today as a semipro playing manager in Frederick, Maryland, he's never forgotten the big-time headlines he missed. The hardest lesson he had to learn, he admits, was to swallow his disappointment when the majors bounced him back to the bushes. But he's always managed to drown his sorrows in a close ball game. But more than that, he hopes to be winning games on the pitching mound as long as his rubber arm will wave. Long may it.

Hogan-Demaret Bet Is Accepted

TOLEDO, Ohio, July 15.—(P)—Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret, the two Texans who won the Inverness four-ball matches (and $2,000) in June, found takers today for their offer to wager $2,000 on their ability to beat any two professionals in a best-ball match over 36 holes. A group of Inverness members announced they were willing to back their home pro, Byron Nelson, and any partner he might select, to the tune of $2,000, and that they would donate one-half of the gate receipts, if any, to the American Red Cross.

The group, said its spokesman, "has the money ready to put up any time convenient to Mr. Hogan and Mr. Demaret, the only stipulation being that the match be held on a neutral course."

"Only 77 Days" NEW ORLEANS, La., July 15.—Joe Engel would make much ado over a piece in the paper, a small item in the sports column of Fred Digby (Item-Tribune).

Coincidentally the Pelicans' third straight loss to the Crackers, Digby wrote: "A reminder that the football season is only 66 days to the Boston College-Tulane game."

Once in the midst of a Cracker losing streak, this columnist unwittingly wrote of Georgia Tech's prospects in football, and Engel has never let us forget it.

The disconnected subject of football and Pelican baseball is a reminder that the turning point of local attendance was observed here last Sunday.

After all these years the Pelican fans, encouraged by the team's successes at home, flocked back to the park. It's a flock down here when 5,000 turn out.

Well, it was the turning point. Here was a chance for attendance to rise steadily, but the Pelican ball club itself muffed the golden opportunity.

They looked as bad in two games as a ball club possibly could. One or two of the players actually looked as if they'd quit. One of them finally was taken out of the game.

The 5,000 fans who paid to see the debacle properly left disgusted. And you know how 5,000 disgusted baseball fans can talk.

Charley Hurth, the splendid young business manager of the club, saw his fondest hopes dashed to earth. For now he must start all over again to sell the Pelican baseball club to a rightfully critical New Orleans public.

One thing was proved by the Sunday attendance, and that is New Orleans will turn out for a winner, as ever.

Winning Baseball New Orleans racing fans are subscribing to a bond issue to keep the Fair Grounds in operation. So the horses will run again and baseball observers elsewhere will claim that this is the cause of the decline of interest in baseball.

But one may go back through the years, back to the days of Jules Heinemann and Larry Gilbert, and find that horse racing didn't have any effect on winning baseball.

New Orleans once had the most enthusiastic fans this country knows, outside of Brooklyn. They were so enthusiastic that a tunnel for the visiting club became necessary.

They were racing at the Fair Grounds back in the good old days of local baseball. And they were consistently winning at Heinemann park, too. There was a stretch of 17 years when the Pelicans never once were out of the first division.

So that's the answer—winning baseball. Pelican fans don't tolerate anything else because they have been educated to expect their team annually to be in the thick of the pennant fight.

If the New Orleans club had only looked fairly good and won one of the Sunday games, the fans would have been won over. They would have spread the word, instead of the poison.

All is not lost. Winning baseball will bring them back again.

Stunts Pall It has been said that baseball by itself is not enough any more; that it takes circus stuff, in addition, to bring out the fans. But it takes nothing of the kind. A young, hustling, Already we have had hundreds of inquiries from persons who have never traveled by plane who seek information about getting to their favorite vacationland," Mr. Mondo said.

NEW YORK, July 15.—(P)—

The buying tide ran to rails and industrial specialties in today's stock market, with many so-called leaders drifting through a narrow irregular channel.

Farm implements were among the strongest performers, getting up 1 to 3 points. Gains elsewhere ranged from fractions to a point or so. Steels, motors, rubbers, oils and aircrafts failed to do much on the upside.

Trends were a bit spotty from the start but plus signs were in the majority at the close. Of 768 shares, 336 were up, 214 down and 218 unchanged.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held a net advance of 2 of a point at 43.7 and was at the best level since January. Dealings expanded in the forenoon and slowed after midday. Transfers of 702,900 shares compared with 563,830 yesterday.

In addition to the continuance of optimistic business prospects, said, it was the main market claim of the Nazis and Bolsheviks from the various Russian battle fronts were thought to have provided scant speculative inspiration.

Small gainers in a ragged curb were: Cities Service, Brewster Aero, Glen Alden Coal and American Gas. Volume here was around 112,000 shares versus 106,000 the day before.

DAILY BOND AVERAGES.

NEW YORK, July 15.—(P)—

Chief interest in today's bond market centered in the rails which were active and higher by fractions to more than a point. Numerous issues established new 1941 tops.

Utilities, industrials and the miscellaneous list showed only minor changes except by fractional amounts on Monday when a lowering of commission rates diverted from the over-the-counter market a substantial volume of business. Prices were steady.

Gains in a few Latin American foreign dollar bonds were quiet. Total volume of $9,016,800 in value, compared with $9,496,850 on Monday.

Among the more active rails were Seaboard Air Line Consolidated at 8 3/8, Washash at 4 1/2, Pittsburgh &amp; West Va. ("A") at 1-28 at 64-1/2, New York &amp; Erie at 1-28 at 64-1/2, Missouri &amp; Pacific at 1-28 at 64-1/2, St. Louis-San Francisco at 1-28 at 64-1/2, Rock Island at 1-28 at 64-1/2, and Chicago &amp; North Western at 1-28 at 64-1/2.

Ahead elsewhere were Montana Electric at 1-28 and Texas Corporation at 1-28. Unchanged to lower issues included Western Union and International Telephone &amp; Telegraph at 1-28.

Sao Paulo stamped 7s were 1-12 lower at 55, but Uruguay 3-12s were up 3/4 at 40 and Panama 3-12s were ahead 3-3/4 at 56 1/8.

Russians, Nazis Swap Atrocity Tales in Battle of Broadcasts

Erskine Caldwell Finds German Transcriptions Carry Ridiculously Untrue Stories; Propaganda Versions Vary.

MOSCOW.—Don't forget the radio when posting the Russo-German war ledger. Tank and aviation battles may be supplying the most pulse-quickenings episodes along the actual war front but there is also a battle of broadcasts going on. And the radio increases in importance as each day passes.

I have just read a large number of transcriptions of German radio programs as heard in Moscow—programs designed primarily for consumption in Germany and occupied states and territories. The transcriptions were made here by government listeners and were translated into Russian and English from the German.

Yesterday the Soviet Union officially recognized the existence of these programs from Germany and said they were attempts to befuddle the world by making misleading statements. A government spokesman said:

"Germany charges the Red army with atrocities in order to cover up their own misdeeds." He branded as absolutely false a German radio statement, sent to all parts of the world, that Soviet soldiers were murdering priests and the Baltic republics and women and children in Belorussia.

German Broadcast.

The statement had gone out from the German air that these alleged acts were carried out when the Red army fell back and left portions of the civilian population in those regions.

The spokesman mentioned in particular German air statements, which he called "outright lies," that Russians had gouged out the eyes of women and dismembered the bodies of babies. He declared also that Germany was once more putting into use selected items from its storehouse of sea atrocity stories.

A few days ago, I read a transcription of a radio program from Germany which said that the Soviet Union took babies from their mothers at the age of one year and placed them in nurseries, kindergartens and other institutions and prevented their mothers from ever seeing the children again.

Personally, I have had too many children crawling over my lap in Soviet homes to take any stock in this story.

One of the most elaborate stories to be transcribed from the German radio has had many variations during the past two years. I first heard it in another form told about French, Czech, Polish and Belgian soldiers. The version heard here two days ago by government listeners is as follows:

The German radio said that German soldiers storming the Soviet lines found Russian machine-guns buried in their trenches in a standing position up to their arm pits. The transcription said the Russian soldiers thanked the German soldiers for rescuing them and said that Soviet political commissars had made them stand in trenches while earth was filled in around them. The object was to prevent them from abandoning their machine-guns when the Germans advanced.

The German radio claimed that the Soviet political commissars had stamped the earth down tightly with their boots before running away and leaving the Russians to their fate.

New Version, Old Story.

It was said here by government listeners that this is the new version of a German propaganda story first heard two years ago, when the Germans said that Czech soldiers were chained to their machine-guns, and that it had been used in one of many forms each time Germany attacked a new country. The obvious hitch to the story, government radio listeners state, is that the position of political commissars were abolished in the Red army a year ago and that duties previously assigned to them were assumed by regular Red army officers.

This particular German propaganda story was perhaps broadcast at this time in retaliation for a statement made here last week that questioning of captured German prisoners revealed that the majority of them were "politically retarded."

U. S. Warned To Brace for Big Sacrifices

Nation Must Sweat Blood and Tears, Henderson Declares.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 15.—(AP)—The American public was warned by Federal Price Administrator Leon Henderson to brace itself for a tomorrow of industrial dislocation and harsh sacrifice.

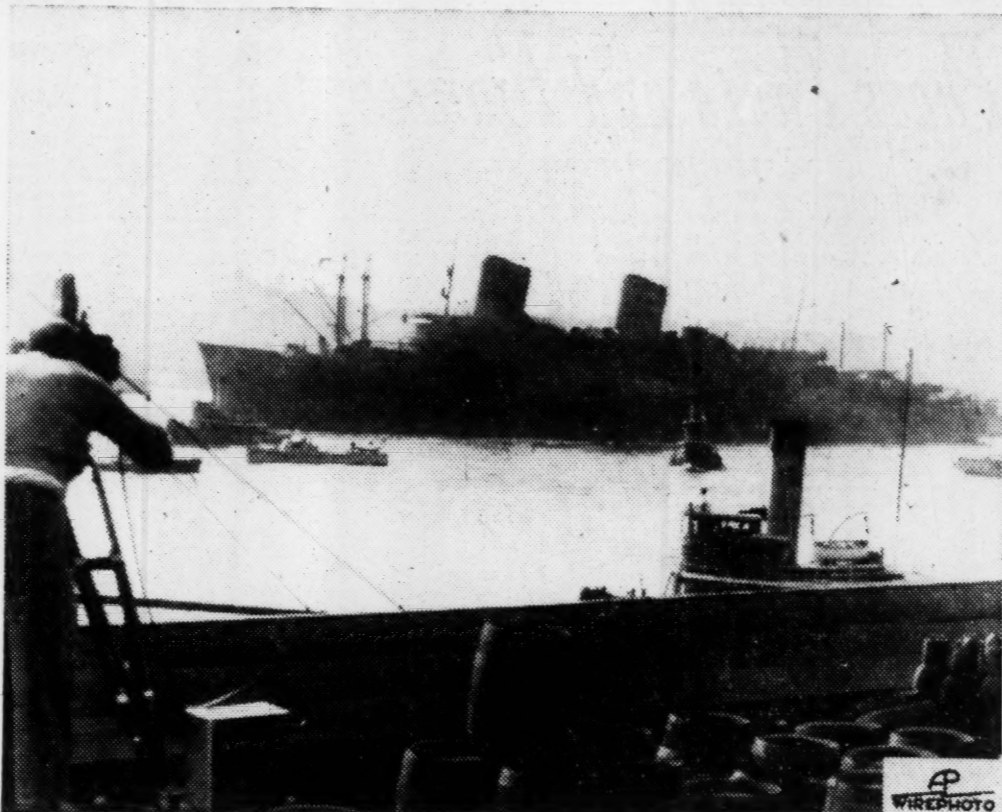

"It is a dark picture I paint," Henderson told 1,200 attending the New York Housewares Manufacturing Association convention as he predicted an end shortly of the recent boom in sales of automobiles, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, radios, electric stoves, furniture and other hard goods.

"It becomes my disagreeable duty," said Henderson, "to tell you that the party is over. . . . Before long now, there will be more purchasing power running around hunting something to buy than there are goods available. . . . I wish I could tell you that we had an easy solution, that everything is going to be all right. I can't promise you any such hope. All I can tell you is that only by shedding blood and tears can the dislocations be held to a minimum. . . . No exactly similar paradox ever confronted American business. Customers eager and able to buy will be crowding the market places and stores, but manufacturers will be unable to get enough raw materials to satisfy demands. . . .

"If we are in earnest about this matter—and I believe deep down we all are—then the American way would be to outproduce Hitler," said Henderson. "We can do this if we spend three hours out of every eight-hour working day for defense."

Big Decrease In Ship Losses Cheers British

June Sinkings Far Below May's; Aerial Swing Said To Be Factor.

LONDON, July 15.—(AP)—Britain drew encouragement today from the announcement of a sharp curtailment in shipping losses and set this down as a concrete indication that the tide was turning in the battle of the Atlantic, chiefly as a result of increased air and surface power at sea.

The loss of British, Allied and neutral vessels for the month of June was placed at 79 ships with gross tonnage of 329,296.

This represented a decrease of 29 ships and 168,551 tons from the battle of the Atlantic will be given at irregular intervals rather than by months.

Hereafter, however, the results of the battle of the Atlantic will be given at irregular intervals rather than by months.

U. S. Planes Helping.

Some of the factors credited by neutral naval observers for the reduction of shipping losses are:

- 1—Increased patrols of flying boats, mainly United States-built Catalinas, which protect convoys and scour seaboards seeking out U-boats and long range bombers.
- 2—Introduction of flotillas of Corvettes to the convoys, releasing more costly and less numerous destroyers for fleet duty.
- 3—Short summer nights limiting the submarines most favorable hours of attack.
- 4—United States patrols which take some burden off British convoys.
- 5—Replacement of shipping with newer, faster vessels better able to escape submarines through speed and maneuverability.
- 6—Speedier turn-arounds in ports for cargo carriers, thus up-setting U-boat time tables.
- 7—Toughness of Seamen.

Toughness of Seamen.

The overshadowing general factor in Britain's new offensive gestures has been, of course, Germany's new preoccupation with Russia on the eastern front.

For the first time since the outbreak of the war, Nazi shipping has been exposed to wholesale attacks by British submarines and bombers and the aerial onslaught has been directed with relatively little notice but great effect against shipping.

People Well Fed.

Authorized sources said Nazi coastwise shipping is being utilized greatly to lift the burden from German railroads since the Russian war began and "we are scoring a steady string of successes by bomb and torpedo against these ships."

The minister of foods, Lord Woolton, told the house of lords that despite the blows sustained—and they have been many from U-boats—the United Kingdom is "fit and there are fewer people suffering from malnutrition at the end of the second year of war than in the days of peace."

Steinhardt Intends To Remain in Moscow

MOSCOW, July 16 (Wednesday)—U. S. Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt said early today that he and his staff had no intention of leaving Moscow.

S. A. Lozovsky, Soviet vice commissar for foreign affairs, earlier had informed the head of the diplomatic corps here, Mohammed Saad, the Iranian (Persian) ambassador, that the Russian government was remaining in Moscow.

All Guns Said Firing When Auckland Sank

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, July 15.—(AP)—The British anti-aircraft sloop Auckland, attacked by 80 Nazi planes off Tobruk, has gone to the bottom of the Mediterranean, all guns firing as she slipped under water, British naval sources reported today.

Bombed by 50 Stukas and 30 Messerschmitt 110's, the 1,200-ton vessel pumped shells into the air even as she broke in two and sank under a shower of 500 to 600 bombs, the British said.

(The admiralty in London announced the loss of the Auckland yesterday but gave no details. It said there had been casualties.)

France's Rule In Syria Ends After 21 Years

All Naval, Land and Air Facilities Taken Over by British.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, July 15.—(AP)—Twenty-one years of French rule in Syria and Lebanon ended at noon today as the mandate was turned over to British occupation under the terms of Monday's Acre armistice.

These terms gave to Great Britain and her Free French allies all naval and military aviation facilities and equipment in Syria and Lebanon, including ships, planes and fuel.

However, Paris newspapers reported that before the armistice most French munitions and reserve stocks of gasoline had been destroyed by order of the French high command in Syria; all French boats were reported to have left Syrian and Lebanese ports and French airplanes to have been flown to Turkey and North Africa so that they would not fall into British hands.

Terms Said Different.

The Vichy government declined to comment on these reports.

Vichy officials insisted that it had made the British back down by coming to a purely military agreement, which was said to be "profoundly different" from an original British proposal of a political character.

The French information office said that "France has not returned her mandate over Syria and Lebanon and . . . did not sign anything compromising her future in the Near East." By reserving her right to speak in the future, official circles considered that France had avoided a political capitulation.

Armistice terms included: British and Free French forces to occupy Syria and Lebanon. All the honor of war to be rendered the French forces, which are to deliver all arms except individual weapons.

British and Free French prisoners to be freed, including those transferred to France; French prisoners to be freed when treaty will have been executed.

Equipment to British.

French soldiers and civilians to be allowed choice of repatriation, joining British and Free French or remaining in the Levant.

All port installations, naval establishments and all ships, including British vessels in Syrian and Lebanese territorial waters to be turned over intact to the occupying authorities.

All airplanes, all equipment and all aeronautical installations in Syrian and Lebanese territory to be turned over intact immediately after signature of the present convention.

The British to be given an opportunity to utilize all airbases and landing fields existing in Syria and Lebanon.

Stocks of fuel to be delivered intact.

The British not to impose sanctions against French soldiers or administrators.

Accord to be executed by a control commission of five persons, three to be named by the British, two by the French.

Britain's Pact With Russians Called Alliance

Churchill Says Affiance Does Not Condone Communism.

LONDON, July 15.—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill today wiped away all fine distinctions concerning Britain's relationship with Russia in the war against Germany by declaring the new British-Russian pact "is of course an alliance and the Russian people are now our allies."

However, Churchill quickly added to his statement to the house of commons that it did not mean an alliance with Communism. He said:

"General Jan Christian Smuts (premier of the Union of South Africa) has made a comment which, as it entirely represents the view of his majesty's government, I should like to repeat now: 'Let no one,' said General Smuts, 'say we are now in league with the Communists and are fighting the battle of Communism.'"

"If this Hitler, in his insane megalomania, has driven Russia to fight him in self-defense, we bless her arms and wish her all success without for a moment broadening ourselves with her Communist creed. Hitler made her his enemy and not us friendly to her creed."

Thus Britain has quickly moved through these stages since Hitler invaded Russia June 22:

- 1—Told the world through a broadcast by Churchill that "Russia's danger is our danger" and that "any man or state that fights against Hitler will have our aid."
- 2—Exchanged military and economic missions with Russia, the Soviet delegation being received in London July 8 by a crowd singing the "Internationale" and raising the Communist clenched fist in salute.
- 3—Signed in Moscow July 12 a British-Russian treaty pledging mutual support in war "against Hitlerite Germany" and pledging each nation not to sign a separate peace.
- 4—Described this pact as an "alliance."

Showing irritation over last week's three-day debate in commons on war production, Churchill declared that statements criticizing British production had caused serious harm abroad. He promised a third day of discussion soon at which the government would be prepared to answer.

Germany To Release 2 U. S. Correspondents

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, announced today that arrangements had been made for the return of two American correspondents held by German authorities.

The two, Jay Allen and Richard C. Hottelet, will travel to the United States on the transport West Point along with American consular officials from Italy, Germany and German-occupied territory.

Special Train Of Americans Leaves Rome

ROME, July 15.—(AP)—A special train bore expelled United States consular staff members, their families and pets, including nine dogs, three cats and two canaries, from warring Italy toward neutral Portugal today on the first leg of their long trip home.

Leslie Reed, former consul general at Athens, headed the party of 76 assembled from consulates and consulates-general of Italy and Greece.

They moved out under Axis orders of June 19, which followed by four days the Washington request for withdrawal of German consular staffs from the United States. Italy charged that the Americans "attitude and activity" had given rise to grave criticism.

At Lisbon they will board the U. S. S. naval transport West Point.

Judy Canova Seeks Divorce

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—(AP)—Judy Canova, the movies' backwoods warbler, who was "pitted" by a soft moon and married unexpectedly in Honolulu a month ago, filed suit today for a divorce or annulment.

The suit, naming Corporal James H. Ripley, of Ft. Ruger, Honolulu, as defendant, was not specific. It merely charged cruelty as the basis for a divorce plea, and alleged fraud as the ground for an annulment.

The actress returned here three days after the ceremony June 14, leaving the bridegroom in an Army guardhouse, to which officers said he was assigned for going A. W. O. L. after the ceremony.

It was Miss Canova's second marriage. Her first, to Robert Burns, New York insurance man, in 1936, ended with a Florida divorce in March, 1939.

Nazi Radio Interview Spoiled By Waves of Russian Planes

NEW YORK, July 15.—(UP)—A German radio broadcast this afternoon from "somewhere on the Russian front" was interrupted by several waves of Russian planes which drove the Nazi radio reporter and a lieutenant whom he was about to interview to air raid shelters.

The short-wave broadcast had been under way only a few seconds when the Russian planes arrived, according to the account heard in New York.

The reporter later came back on the air, explaining that he had been compelled to dive into a shelter.

After a third interruption the German lieutenant came on the air and, in a trembling voice, explained that the Russian planes had caused no important damage.

Nazi Censors Republic Steel Limit Rome Agrees To Sign Broadcasting CIO Contract

CBS Correspondent Reports Italy Must Follow German Dictates.

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP)—An increasing German censorship of broadcasting in Rome was reported today by Charles M. Barbe, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent there, in a cablegram to CBS headquarters here listing six new censorship restrictions, by Italian authorities. Because of these restrictions CBS is suspending its Rome broadcasts.

Taft Condemns F. D. R. For Iceland Occupation

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio, said tonight that occupation of Iceland by United States naval forces indicated "a deliberate policy to involve the United States in war without congressional action."

"Iceland is a part of Europe, and we are therefore now intervening in Europe," he said in a speech prepared for radio delivery. "For the first time we are sending American soldiers and sailors into the midst of the war zone. . . . We are relieving 80,000 British soldiers for action at the front, and therefore, for the first time taking an active military part in the war between England and Germany."

Adelaide Hill's Visit Marked By View of Family Landmark

By SALLY FORTH.

ONE OF THE MOST attractive of the midsummer visitors is lovely Adelaide Hill, of New York, who is the guest of her college roommate, Jacquelin Thiesen, on Inman circle. It was quite by accident that the two girls, whose mothers were girlhood friends, came to room together at Gunston Hall in Washington, for they did not know each other until they were assigned to the same room.

Jacquelin, it seems, wrote her mother, Mrs. Jack Thiesen, that she was rooming with a girl named Adelaide from New York. Subsequently she wrote that Adelaide's parents once lived in Atlanta, and eventually that she was the niece of Mrs. Lucien Cocke, of Roanoke, Va. Then it dawned on Mrs. Thiesen that her daughter's New York roommate was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Hill, and that her mother was the former Adelaide Singleton, of Atlanta.

Adelaide has such a large and important connection here that it is hard to find time to see all her relations. Too, it is her first visit to Atlanta, and she has been greatly interested in seeing all the landmarks of which her parents spoke so often, including the spot where her father was born at the corner of Peachtree and Baker streets. She and her younger sister, Ellen Cobb Hill, make their home in New York with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ashby Hill, and it was only because Ellen Cobb had to take entrance examinations for college in the fall that she did not accompany Adelaide to Atlanta.

Mrs. Fred Warr, the former Runa Erwin, entertained at a swimming party yesterday in compliment to her young cousin. The party was held at the Capital City Country Club at Brookhaven, and Runa's guest list included only Adelaide's relatives and friends of her mother.

Tea was served on the club terrace following the swim, with guests seated at a table adorned with an oblong basket of colorful garden flowers. Covers were placed for Adelaide, Jacquelin and her mother, Mrs. Thiesen; Mrs. W. M. King, Mrs. F. W. Blalock and her daughter, Martha; Mrs. John M. Couper, Isabel Couper, Mrs. Frank Farley, Mildred Seydel, Mrs. Arnold Broyles and Dorothy See.

GEORGE IRWIN, his mother, Mrs. E. B. Irwin, and his uncle, George Ramsey, have just returned from an extensive tour of New England and eastern Canada. The trio visited Montreal, Quebec, Halifax in Nova Scotia, and many places of historic interest in Connecticut, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Maine. En route home, they spent several days in New York City, where they saw some of the new theatrical productions, among other things.

George, who is one of the more popular sophomores at Tech and a member of the S. A. E. fraternity, had a grand time. In fact, he has never enjoyed a trip more, but he is exceedingly glad to be back in Atlanta, for a reason that is best known to his fraternity brothers. You see, even the vastness of Canada or the glamour of Fifth Avenue fails to absorb one's attention when one's MAIN interest is in Atlanta.

ONE OF the show places of south Georgia is the historic home of the late Jeremiah and Mourning Frances Inman, which was built in the sixties in the Bark Camp church vicinity near Midville. The antebellum mansion, which has recently been restored by a granddaughter of the original owners, Miss Maude E. Hodges, of Midville and Atlanta, was the scene recently of the second annual reunion of the Inman descendants.

Miss Hodges has restored the old cookhouse with its eight-foot open fireplace, the well with a sweep and oaken bucket, the three-story smokehouse, and the barn and outhouses, which have been remodeled in keeping with the originals. The house, designed in the early colonial period of architecture, which is also being renewed, contains a wide hallway, plastered walls, marble mantels, and wide pine floors. The room over the dining room, which houses a secret staircase and deep windows on all sides, will also be restored. Even the shrubbery and grove of trees surrounding the "big" house and the six remaining slave cabins are being replanted by Miss Hodges to recapture the

Frosty Drinks Can Make the Party

Drinks with tomato juice as base make energy-giving, between-meals refreshments.

By Sally Saver.

Let's have a party . . . well, not really a party at all, but a bit of refreshment for whoever is around at that zero hour of the afternoon when spirits are lowest.

Let's serve an ice cold beverage, of course. Since it's not long before dinner it shouldn't be sweet or rich enough to destroy the appetite. Tomato juice or a drink with tomato juice as a base is perfect to serve at this time. It's full of nourishment to furnish a quick energy pick-up, and at the same time it's an appetite encourager.

Tomato juice is mighty good when served plain or with a dash of Worcestershire sauce, but it can be varied with some unusual and tasty additions. A tomato juice-vegetable cocktail or a tomato-grapefruit juice cocktail makes an invigorating between-meals snack when served with canapés of cream cheese and olives, spiced meats, or perhaps roquefort spread.

Tomato Vegetable Cocktail.
1 can tomato juice
1 tablespoon watercress, finely chopped
1 teaspoon chives, finely chopped
1 tablespoon lime juice
1 teaspoon sugar
1 pinch salt

Remove watercress leaves from stems and chop very fine. Combine tomato juice, chopped watercress, chopped chives, lime juice, sugar and salt. Mix thoroughly and chill. Makes 2 glassesful.

Tomato Grapefruit Juice Cocktail.

1 can tomato juice
1-3 cup of grapefruit juice (unsweetened)
1 teaspoon sugar
1-4 teaspoon salt

Mix the tomato juice, grapefruit juice, sugar and salt. Chill and serve. Makes 2 glassesful.

Questions about foods, recipes, cooking and serving will be answered by Sally Saver. Write or phone The Constitution or Walnut 6565.

All the discomforts have been removed from suntanning by a preparation which protects you from burning while permitting you to tan, which is as delightfully refreshing as cologne, and which even repels insects! Pretty Priscilla Lane, of Warner Brothers, does her suntanning in a gay cotton play-bathing suit. Shirred lastex makes it fit snugly at the waist.

New Sun Lotion Bluffs Mosquitoes

By Winifred Ware.

The old maxim that nothing is so good that it can't be improved upon certainly applies to suntan preparations: Just when it seemed that such preparations had been developed so as to take care of all possible situations, along comes one which in addition to doing a good protective job is actually insect repellent.

You might therefore think that the lotion would be a smelly one. Such is not the case. It has a clean, slightly spicy fragrance, really pleasant, and not too strong. Why the mosquitoes don't like it I can't imagine, but it's a miraculous fact that they don't. Result is that you can just dream while you sun bathe instead of spending your time shooing and slapping mosquitoes, flies and other pests.

Besides this feature the lotion is one of the nicest kinds of sunburn preventatives. It's a clear golden liquid without a trace of grease or oil. It feels as refreshing as a cologne and unlike a cream or thick lotion it won't make you feel sticky when you get hot.

If you're swimming, apply the liquid each time after you come out of the water. If you're sunning for very long replenish your coat of lotion during the period. You'll find that the more lotion you use, the less burn or tan you'll get. Vary the amount according to the sensitiveness of your skin. By the way, have you tried applying suntan lotion with an atomizer? It spreads the lotion on more evenly, aids in reaching shoulder blades and saves the liquid. I'll be glad to tell you about this mosquito repellent suntan lotion which comes in 85c and $1.00 sizes. Call me at Walnut 6565 or write me in care of The Atlanta Constitution, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Clinging to Memory May Be Costly

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie: I am engaged to a man and I am not sure that I love him enough to marry him. There is someone else whom I know I love and I am quite sure that he once loved me. We had a fuss and now he will not come back, although I have told him that I still love him and have asked him to come back. He said the night we parted that he still loved me.

After we broke up, I began going with the boy to whom I am now engaged. He is in the Army and has five more months of service.

Must I keep my promise and marry him when he is out of the Army and has begun working, or must I tell him I can not and wait for this other man whom I love to come back? We broke up six months ago. I have been engaged three weeks. I have known him for three years. He wants to marry now, but I have told him that I would not marry until he is out of the Army. I know he will be good to me and will do anything he can to make me happy. I love him but love the other one best.

WORRIED. I would never advise anyone to marry someone whom she did not love. It is not fair to the man and it is not fair to yourself, and there will be little happiness in the marriage for either of you. The Army man sounds like the best bet to me, and as you admit that you love him, I think that as time goes on you may learn to love him a great deal more. After all, you say that you will not marry him while he is in the Army and as he has several more months' of training, I think you will have ample time to make up your mind.

If you have told this other man you still love him, and he tells you he loves you, I do not understand why the misunderstanding exists. If you think there is any hope of a reconciliation, I would not continue to be engaged to the man in the Army. Of course, you may think that it may be a good idea to have him as a certainty if the other one fails you, but I do not think you would be playing the game very fairly.

The Army man, I think, would make you a good husband, and since you have several months before you have to make up your mind, perhaps you love him deeper. Perhaps you are only clinging to a memory in loving the other boy. A lot of girls will hold on to an old love so long that they are blinded to the real thing when it comes along. Just holding on to a memory of this other boy is not going to help you any.

OBVIOUS PURSUIT WILL ACHIEVE LITTLE
Dear Dixie: Although he taught me during the last semester of the seventh grade, I adored him then, and that adoration has kept growing during the past four years (it has been that long since I have seen him.) I just do not seem to like anyone else. Don't think this is a school girl infatuation, because I was older than the average student and he was younger than the average teacher.

I was doing little favors, such as bringing flowers to him in the mornings. He was never unkind or cross with me in any way, as so many teachers are with their students at one time or another. What I want to know is this: Would it be all right for me to write him just a casual, friendly letter? When school opens again could I go back to the city where he teaches and visit him during school hours? If neither of these suggestions are good how can I get in contact with him again and decide if it is he whom I really care for? It means so much to me.

WONDERING. A casual friendly letter never did any harm, but unless you have heard from him in four years I really think a letter to him would be rather a bolt from the blue, so to speak. Just suddenly receiving a letter from you, would naturally arouse a bit of wondering regardless of the fact that he may be pleased to hear from you. I think if I were you and wanted to write him, I would have some definite reason in view. Such as: When does school reopen, followed by the fact that you would so enjoy visiting some of your old haunts there, and perhaps you may arrange a visit. If you plan to go back to the city and pay a visit to the school, you will have to arrange it so that it will not be apparent that it is a trip to see the teacher.

Points for Parents

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Father: "It is as important to be a good listener as it is to be able to talk well. Let's each one tell a short story and the others practice being good listeners."

Father: "If you want to be a success, you must learn to speak up. Take command of the conversation and keep it or the other fellow will get ahead of you."

MY DAY: MacLeish Reads To Student Group

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

EASTPORT, Maine, Monday.—Yesterday was a very delightful day. First, for half an hour, Mrs. Archibald MacLeish sang us charming French and German songs. Then the whole group began to sing with her. While they have not done much singing as a group, I found they showed signs of getting together and really enjoying it. We have several young people with very nice voices and several who play the piano.

Dr. and Mrs. David Levy lunched with us and after lunch we went back to join the student and listen to Mr. MacLeish, who read a commencement address which he delivered this spring, and his poem, "America Was Promises." To hear him read, either prose or poetry, is an unforgettable experience. It was so beautiful that I think that everyone present felt that, in applauding, they were breaking a spell of beauty which had been cast about them.

At about 3:30 Mr. and Mrs. MacLeish left and then I listened to a discussion between Justice Frankfurter and some of the students on the need for political organizations.

To my joy, when we returned to our own house, I found that our son, Jimmy, and his wife had arrived. Soon after, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Jr. came, having flown up from New York City under somewhat uncertain weather conditions. The fog here was thick until about 5 o'clock, when it suddenly began to clear and the setting sun shone through a rift in the clouds on the water, making the mouth of the river look like a pool of gold.

Today is a really beautiful day and I hope we shall have one of our best sunsets to show Dr. Alfred Cohn and Justice Frankfurter how beautiful this place can really be. For the past two days they have had rain and fog, mixed with a heavy Scotch mist whenever the rain stopped, which anywhere else would be called a drizzle.

Yesterday evening I read aloud some selections of rather lighter poetry, ending up with one serious group from "John Brown's Body," by Stephen Vincent Benet, after which the students began to ask for poems which were special favorites. I was interested to find how many young people read poetry for pleasure. One of them asked me to bring some poems by Langston Hughes, another would like me to read Hood's "The Song of the Shirt."

A few letters were written last night, but I still have a desk covered with things which ought to be done before I leave here Tuesday morning. I have little time this morning, because Justice Frankfurter is going to speak at 10:30 and none of us want to miss hearing his speech and the discussion afterwards.

Woman's Quiz

Q. Please give directions for starching crocheted luncheon sets.

A. Use the following special finish: Add 1 pint of cold water to 1 ounce of gum arabic and heat until it has dissolved. Dilute with hot water (1 part solution to 5 to 10 parts hot water), the quantity depending on the stiffness desired.

Q. How may I remove perfume stains from a dress?

A. On white materials, remove perfume spots by sponging with peroxide of hydrogen; on colored fabrics, if the color has been removed by the alcohol in the perfume, nothing can be done.

How Flattering is Your Face Powder

-at the critical "2-foot line"?

A MAN'S EYES can be so unkind! They can be like magnifying mirrors that accent every little line in your face—exaggerate every tiny defect of your skin.

Never mind how you look across the room or from a distance! How does your skin look up close? What do his eyes see when you're only two feet away?

The impression you make depends so much on the face powder you use. If it's coarse-grained and uneven, you can be sure your skin won't look fresh and inviting to his eyes. It will look rough and "crepey"—it may even look as though it's getting a bit old.

A New Kind of Face Powder
Ask any skin specialist! He'll tell you that a coarse powder tends to make the texture of your skin look coarse and unattractive, too.

But you'll be taking no such risk when you use Lady Esther Face Powder! For it's as flattering in a close-up as it is from a distance.

Why? Because it's blown by Twins! Hurricanes until it's softer and smoother by far than any ordinary powder! Because its shades are unlike any you've ever known—vibrant and fascinating! And, most important—because it's loyal! It doesn't fade, streak, cake, dissolve, discolor, disappear—the way old-fashioned face powders often do.

Why don't you try Lady Esther Face Powder! See for yourself why more women use it than any other kind of powder.

Scrap Books Shown Here

Artistic garden club scrapbooks and yearbooks will come from the nucleus of the interesting exhibit at the Garden Center for the next 10 days. The collection includes the prize-winning scrapbook of the Seven Hills Garden Club of Rome, those of the Daffodil Garden Club of Decatur, and the Pine Tree Club, of Atlanta, which won honorable mention, as well as artistic ones compiled by the Club Estates, Rosemary, and Rose Garden Clubs. Also displayed will be the yearbook of the Thomaston Garden Club which won first prize, the Edikston yearbook which received honorable mention, and many others belonging to local garden clubs.

Recently the Whiteford Garden Club arranged sprays of Piccadilly gladioli with roses in a white pottery container which was placed in the niche while the mantel was centered with a shallow bowl of trailing ivy with a pair of figures as interesting accessories. Two decorated pottery vases held mixed bouquets and other arrangements were placed on occasional tables.

For a well-balanced niche arrangement the Ben Hill Garden Club chose a sea green glass container to hold handsome gladioli combined with calla leaves. An unglazed pottery jar on the mantel held a simple but effective arrangement of blackberry sprays while gladioli and blue salvia were loosely arranged in an old milk-glass compote. Tiger lilies, shasta daisies were combined with summer blossoms in other containers.

A beautiful specimen of Lilium Anatum Playphyllum was also exhibited, grown by Miss Dorothy Martin of the Linwood Garden Club.

The decorations at the Garden Center this week will be arranged by the Johnson Estates Garden Club, with Mrs. Paul D. Charles, president and the Linwood Garden Club, whose president is Mrs. J. A. Bartlett.

Huckleberry stems and fern banded the improvised altar, which was centered with white cathedral candles and flanked with arrangements of white gladioli and California daisies. Jack Sheriff, of Atlanta, served as best man for the groom, and the groomsmen were William Davies and Bruce Roan, of Chattanooga.

Mrs. William Bruce Davies, of Chattanooga, and Mrs. Robert Ernest McKnight, of Nashville, were their sister's only attendants. They wore gowns of pale green marquisette with picture hats of matching hair braid and carried bouquets of yellow Gloria roses.

George W. Hamilton gave his daughter in marriage. She was lovely in a gown of white starched marquisette, the girle and bouffant skirt being banded with lace. Her fingertip-length veil of illusion tulle was caught to her hair with a Mary-Queen-of-Scots cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of snow-white roses.

A small reception followed the ceremony, after which the couple left for a wedding trip to New England and Canada. The bride traveled in a black and white tulle silk ensemble with matching accessories and a shoulder spray of white orchids.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hamilton, of Dalton. Her maternal grandparents are Mrs. Lillian Whitman Carter, of Dalton, and the late Benjamin F. Carter, of Carters. The late Betty Lucky and George W. Hamilton, pioneer citizens of Dalton, were her paternal grandparents. She has two sisters, Mrs. William Bruce Davies,

"I HAVE SOMETHING FOR YOU"

Evening's Shock Jolts Mike Out of Rut

He Writes Long Postponed Story

By Margaret Gorman Nichols.
Author of "I'll Wait for You" and "Kiss After Midnight."

Kit Marshall leaves her Aunt Chris in Washington, D. C., to avoid her friends when she learns that her father, now dead, went to prison as an embezzler. After three jobless months in New York she nervously becomes social secretary to Tracy Fields, young heir of a constant fortune. Tracy, who is a chauffeur calls for her in the car is a young man. He says he is Mike Saunders, newspaperman, that he has known Tracy for five years and is going to her Connecticut place for a swim. Kit likes him at once. He joins Tracy in watching her cousin, Tony Merryman, and Kirk Griswold, a summer neighbor, play tennis, joshing her about Kirk's being her "latest." Tony, jobless, and his pretty wife, Anita, live with Tracy. Kit meets Kirk on a train going to New York and dines with him though she remembers Tracy is expecting him. When Tracy says Kirk was kind to her only through sympathy, she knows Tracy is jealous and says she must leave but Tracy asks her to forget what has been said. When Kirk tries to make an engagement, Kit uses her aunt's visit to New York as an excuse, although she knows now that she loves him. Tracy gives a party for a hundred people and Kit collapses while it is in full swing. Kirk finds young Dr. Mitchell among the guests but he is in full swing. Kit hurries her to a New York hospital. He tells Kit, Kirk and Mike later that she had been in a coma from diabetes and will be in the hospital about three weeks. Mike says she will die, she will follow the strict regimen required of a diabetic.

INSTALLMENT XIV.

Kit said, "Yes, Mike, Tracy will learn the rules."
"I know her better than either of you."
Kit said suddenly, "Tony asked me to phone him. I promised. I hate to tell him abruptly over the telephone, I'll tell him she's comfortable and tell him the real trouble when I get home."
Both Kirk's and Mike's eyes followed her to the booth.

Mike said, "Someday I'm going to be fool enough to ask her to marry me."
Kirk's blue eyes seemed to stab him. "Do you think she will?"
"Like most of us, Kit has a lot to learn—about herself."
"She has the secret of happiness, Mike."

"What's that?"
Kirk's jaw tightened. He spoke slowly. "She just wants to be happy. If Kit prays, she doesn't pray for money or a mink coat or any specific thing, but just for a happy life."

Mike wondered why he was so reticent suddenly. If it were anyone other than Kirk, whose own reticence Mike respected, he'd have cried out: "Are you in love with her? If you aren't, don't play with your attraction to her, a perfectly natural attraction, sure. What man would not be attracted to Kit? Tracy is attractive, too. Tracy is potential fireworks. Why are we all so cockeyed that we don't know whether we're in love or not? Why can't we know ourselves better? Why do we have to be beaten around before we know the answers?"

But Kirk, steady and a little shy, walked on firm ground and kept his eyes open. Mike thought. Of all of them, Kirk was probably the only one who knew where he was going.

When Kit returned to the table, she said, "Tony said that everything is going beautifully with the party at the house." She thought then, "I've got to ride all the way back alone with Kirk. Funny, I want to terribly and I don't want to terribly."
Mike said, "Well, I'm going home." He Kit looked at him. "I hope to send you orchids again on a happier occasion. Good night to both of you."

Half an hour later Mike walked into his apartment building and stepped into the elevator. He stepped off again on the third floor and let himself in the dark, cluttered one-room kitchen and bath apartment he called home. The hated wave of melancholia swept over him again. He felt ill. He slumped into a stained and dusty chair, leaned forward and put his face in his hands. It was a moment of stark realism from which lately he had been trying to run away.

There wasn't a lot of time to do something with your life. Tomorrow wasn't promised to you. You only thought it was. There wasn't any tomorrow on which to begin. There was only today, this hour, this minute that you were really sure of. Look at Tracy. . . . What had happened tonight had shown them all that this minute was the only one they were sure of.

"This minute. . . . Mike raised his head, frowned, took a deep breath. Begin tonight one of the short stories he's been meaning to write? Tonight? Lord, he was so tired, so tired—the let-down after the drinks and the excitement. He was tired and depressed and the hideous hole of a home gave him the jitters.

He stood up. The bed looked inviting and he thought for a moment how good it would be to fall on it, clothes and all, and fall asleep. That's what he'd always done—because there was always tomorrow, the bracing morning coffee, people to talk to and drink with and laugh and argue with. . . . He straightened, No. . . . Now! Now!

Rushing, as if he were late for an appointment, he got out of his clothes, took a cold shower and put on clean pajamas. Then going to the card table by the window he sat down at his typewriter. But he couldn't think! He lighted a cigarette. He made several beginnings that were angrily snatched from the typewriter, "crushed and thrown to the floor. Slowly, painfully, his brain became awake. He forgot his weariness, forgot this terrible thing that had happened to Tracy, forgot Kit and Kirk, forgot Mike Saunders, forgot everything except the people that were coming alive beneath his hands.

His shaggy brown head was still bent over the typewriter when the city came to life. He stretched, yawned and thought sleepily of another day. . . . But 20 pages were beside him, a finished short story, the first he had done in years.

His back ached, his eyes felt afire. He got up and walked to the window. People were beginning to move a long the street. Not melancholia but triumph washed over him. He had done it. It could be done. . . . He thought, "This feeling of accomplishment is so much better than the false, high feelings you get by drinking. This is swell. . . . This is swell."

He turned and looked at the bed. He could sleep now for a few hours, the best sleep he had had in years.

Kit and Kirk sat side by side during the drive back to Connecticut.

Kit felt strangely bereft of words and Kirk, too, obviously, for he sat looking thoughtfully out the window at the quickly changing landscapes. Had not he, of whom she was so excitedly aware, been near she would have felt hollow and empty. Kit thought. It was impossible not to be conscious of the physical Kirk. His arms folded, his fine, head turned to the window. If he loved Tracy, could this make a difference? Surely not. . . . Her thoughts were interrupted by his "Will you have a cigarette, Kit?"

"Yes, I'd like one, thanks."

Their heads came close in the brief, bright flame of the match and then separated a in.

Kirk said, "You're thinking that you will lose your job."
"No, I wasn't thinking that, but I suppose she'll need a nurse more than a secretary."

"And what will you do? Go back to Washington?"
"No. I'm not going back to Washington. I'll try to get another job here."

"Perhaps the best way to get the chip off your shoulder is to go back to Washington."

"You don't understand." Their eyes met briefly. Kirk's mouth curved. "And you won't tell me. . . ."

"I can't tell anybody. I'm too ashamed."
"You're not married, are you?"
"No! I'm not married. I wish I hadn't told you anything."
"I wish you had not, too."

The silence was heavy between them during the remainder of the drive.

There were no cars parked in the driveway of Tracy's house now. Nor were there any lights shining from the house. The only light was the light in the sky, the light of a new day on a Sunday morning in July.

Kirk said, "I'll go in with you. Perhaps Tony and Anita are waiting up."

"I hope everyone had a good time."

"I'm sure of that."

When she went in, disorder greeted her at every turn. It was a discouraging spectacle, the house after a big party the night before.

Tony and Anita were in the drawing room, Tony sitting in a chair, smoking, with a cup of coffee on the table beside him, Anita asleep on the divan.

"I thought you'd never get here," Tony said. "How is she?"

Anita opened her eyes, blinked away sleep, sat up and patted her dark hair back in place.

Kirk told them what Dr. Mitchell had said. Tony blanched. Anita cried, "Oh, my darling Tracy. . . ."

Tony said, "Please be quiet, dear. Don't make a scene."

"But she'll die! She'll die!" Kit spoke up. "Not necessarily. We must all co-operate with her and help her to live, help her to see that it's important for her to do what they tell her. We may see her today."

Kirk said, "It's been a bad night for all of us. Suppose we talk more about it after we've had some sleep. And if there's anything I can do, you know where I am."

Abruptly he turned and left them.

Kit ached from weariness. "Shall I tell Mrs. Intyre and the other servants?"

"I'll tell her," Tony said. "She's devoted to Tracy. There have been difficulties but—but Mac has been very loyal." He shook his head and looked at Kit. "I hope you stay. I think she'll need you more than ever now. Thanks for what you did tonight."

"Don't thank me for anything." "It was a great party. I must remember to tell her that. . . . You need some sleep."

"Don't you think I need sleep?" Anita asked. "Oh, I'm simply dead. I told you it was foolish to wait up like this, darling. Poor Tracy. . . . Of course she must get well."

Chile Oil Farms.

Chile is promoting the production of essential oils from domestic grown plants. The government is now making qualified loans to farmers who wish to cultivate medicinal herbs. Chilean production of essential oils began about a decade ago when a large landowner near Santiago imported seeds from Europe. Favored by climate, labor costs and other factors he supplied the domestic requirement of many products formerly imported. In some cases he had an exportable surplus. Since the outbreak of the European war Chile has received many bids for these products from abroad.

Lily Pons Sing Tonight at 8 Jolson Is Guest

Burns and Allen Also To Appear on 'Millions for Defense.'

Lily Pons, Al Jolson and Burns and Allen volunteer their talent for the third "Treasury Hour Millions for Defense" program, boosting Defense Bond sales, on Columbia network and WGST night at 8 o'clock.

The program, which was made possible on Columbia network when an oil company donated regular 60 minutes of radio time, the United States Treasury Department, presents its third straight lineup for coast-to-coast defense.

Here's the lineup: Coloratura soprano star Lily Pons, Maestro Andre Kostelanetz, the Aldrich Family, Burns and Allen, Harmonica Wizard Larry Adler, Master of Ceremonies Al Jolson, Block's choir, Al Goodman's orchestra. Earle McGill directs. Larry Elliott announces. "Treasury Hour—Millions for Defense" is produced in behalf of the sale of United States government defense bonds and stamps.

Benay Venuta, blonde singer, star of stage and radio, will add a new accomplishment to her crowded career this summer, officiating as Budd Hulick's "coco" on the weekly "Quizzer Baseball" broadcast on the NBC Red Network and WSB tonight at 8 o'clock.

Miss Venuta was guest "coco" on the initial "Quizzer Baseball" program, and as a result of that performance, she has been signed permanently for the role starting with the program tonight. Contestants on "Quizzer Baseball" are drawn from the studio audience and formed into two "teams," with Hulick and Miss Venuta as captains. Questions are "tossed" at the guests, with correct answers resulting in "hits" and "runs."

Peter Van Steeden's orchestra featured "between innings" with Harry Von Zell officiating as "umpire" and announcer. "Quizzer Baseball" is the summer replacement for Eddie Cantor's "Time to Smile" series which returns to the air in the fall.

"You and I" by Meredith Willson, written originally as a theme for NBC's Coffee Time program will be featured by Ginny Simms and Harry Babbitt, during Kay Kyser's College of Musical Knowledge tonight over the NBC-Red Network and WSB at 9 o'clock. Kyser's novel arrangement of the "Hut Sut Song," featuring Iva Kabbille, Miss Simms, Babbitt and Sully Mason, will be the production number. Ginny Simms solos will be "Peaceful in the Country" and "I Went Out of My Way." Babbitt will sing "Cowboy Serenade" and "Just a Little Bit South of North Carolina," and Sully Mason will present his version of "Ballin' the Jack."

Kyser's orchestra will play "Friendly Tavern," "Maria Elena," "Amapolita" and "Oh Look at Me Now."

Lost Leg Plot.

Charges of fraud have been brought in Rio de Janeiro against a woman, two friends and a lawyer accused of plotting to get more damages for a leg she lost in an accident. Luciana Pereira was crushed between a ferryboat and the pier when she attempted to land. She sued the company and was awarded $1,200. Her friends and a lawyer told her she could obtain five times as much if she could be promoted from servant girl to office worker. They succeeded in placing her name on the official government registration book of a laundry and put in a claim for $7,000. The ferry company, however, discovered the conspiracy.

Dorothy Kilgallen, whose "Voice of Broadway" air column is a CBS Saturday feature, was honored at a baby-shower this week given by the famous actress, Helen Menckon. The air-reporter received over 500 gifts in anticipation of her blessed event. The "arrival" is imminent.

Rent Control In Proposed Legislation

Roosevelt Reveals Studies of Prices Conducted by Henderson.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Far-reaching price control legislation, which may seek to put a ceiling on rents in some areas, as well as on food, clothing and other articles throughout the nation is being given intensive consideration, President Roosevelt disclosed today.

The question was being pursued at a series of conferences in congress, at the office of Leon Henderson, the price control administrator, and at the White House, he said. The information was that the decisions would be reached within a short time.

If a bill was drawn up to curb prices on food and clothing, he said, the question then arose as to whether it should also apply to rents, since the latter affect a large number of families, too. The subjects could be handled in separate legislation or together, he added, and which method was better he did not know.

Police Arrest Pair in Violent Whisky Chase

Two Automobile Crashes And Gunplay Precede Capture.

A police chase after a car loaded with 70 gallons of illegal whisky ended at Fraser and Bass streets last night when officers cornered the alleged driver and wounded his companion who attempted to escape.

Detectives U. G. Oakes and J. D. Adams reported they sighted a suspicious automobile on Kelly street, near Connelly. The pursuit followed along Memorial drive to Fraser, where the fleeing driver struck an automobile driven by W. A. Sauter, of 1973 Jonesboro road.

After the accident, the driver proceeded down Fraser and struck a police car, operated by Patrolmen P. H. Bessley and J. C. Mozley. The car was finally halted by Detectives Oakes and Adams at Bass street.

Archie Pugh, 20, said to be the driver of the car and who said his home was in Cobb county, was lodged at police headquarters on five traffic charges and a whisky charge. His companion, Clyde Ivey, 27, of 867 Washington street, S. W., who was shot in the right arm in an unsuccessful escape attempt, was released under $500 bond on a charge of "disorderly conduct and whisky."

Wheeler Is Irked With Englishmen

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, said in the senate today that Englishmen who "come over here and ridicule congress should be told to go home and mind their own business."

He expressed this view after reading to the senate an interview with Josiah Wedgwood, a member of the British parliament, in which the Englishman was quoted as saying: "Mr. Wheeler is a good man."

"Think of the gall, think of the insolence of a member of the British parliament coming over here and ridiculing the congress of the United States," Wheeler remarked.

Defend Truth, Pittman Tells 600 Teachers

'No Time for Crying,' President Says, 'Do All for State.'

STATESBORO, Ga., July 15.—(AP)—At the last general assembly of the first term of the 1941 summer session President Marvin S. Pittman, ousted head of the Georgia Teachers' College, today told 600 teachers that this is not the time for crying and urged them to live, defend the truth, hold up their heads and defend democracy. President Pittman was not elected at a meeting of the board of regents in Atlanta Monday.

"I have always believed that a teacher by precept, example and participation should be a good citizen of the community in which he lives," Dr. Pittman said. "I have tried to live up to that ideal, and it has been a source of much satisfaction to me that our faculty, our student body, regular session and summer school, and that the citizens of Statesboro, among whom I have lived for seven years, have unanimously indicated that I have taken my place effectively in the life of the community."

Teachers Are Human.
"I have always believed that a teacher should be recognized as a free human being and as a citizen and should therefore have the right to his opinion and the free expression of it as any other citizen should have without fear of political interference or oppression."

"But because I have seen so many teachers who were politicians and not genuine educators, I have teachers the rights that they themselves so strongly assert. I have refrained absolutely from any conscious participation in politics during the past seven years that I have been president of Georgia Teachers' College. . . . Curiously, these charges, in spite of much candor, advertising, were not brought against me, but three other charges totally unfounded and purely malicious."

No Time to Cry.
"Teachers, it is no time for crying; this is not a time for hopelessness. You must live, defend the truth. If our beloved state is ever to be what it should be, teachers must hold up their heads; must inform themselves; must teach, exemplify and defend democracy. Let's all go to work and do a better job of teaching than has ever been done in Georgia."

Dr. Pittman's reference to crying was made because there were tears and red eyes on the campus this morning.

U. S. Production Said Above Axis

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Sidney Hillman declared today that "there is not a single strike in the nation today that is troubling the Government and the United States production is greater than that of the totalitarian states."

"The democratic system is better for production as well as for a way of life," the associate director of the Office of Production Management told a house committee investigating migratory labor.

The avenger of the totalitarian system is that those nations have lost the co-operation of the worker," he continued. "Hitler wanted stability by using slave labor and slave management."

He added that "Hitler has done nothing that we should imitate."

They are giving up one allotted acre for $25 in stamps, which is good for that amount of cotton goods of all kinds.

It is said here that the latest government bounty for the farmer has given a boost to local dry goods trading and it is expected to continue for several weeks as the stamps are received by the farmers.

Rossville Project To Be Considered

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's opposition to the inclusion of the Chattanooga, Tenn.-Rossville, Ga., flood control program in the general flood control bill will be considered by a Senate Commerce Subcommittee tomorrow.
